2pm Sun., March 15, 1992

In August of 1935, the Benny Goodman band began what was to be a three week engagement at Chicago's Congress Hotel. Eight months later, they were still there, and Benny Goodman had been dubbed "The King of Swing."

Led by Goodman on clarinet, the band's distinctive style consisted of simple, swinging arrangements in which complete sections played with the feeling of a single jazz soloist. With hits such as Blue Skies, Body and Soul, Stompin' at the Savoy, Goody, Goody and One O'Clock Jump, the Goodman band was the first swing band ever to appear at Carnegie Hall, paving the way for other Big Bands.

Clarinetist Peanuts Hucko, singers Buddy Greco and Louise Tobin, and drum virtuoso Duffy Jackson combine their talents in The Big Band Salute to Benny Goodman, a musical tribute. Featured are the original musical arrangements now enshrined in the Yale University archives.
