Great French Star Has Natural Role In Film

Most powerful American 'film role yet offered to the international favorite, Jean Gabin, proved a compelling attraction May 22-23 when Universal's stirring drama, "The Imposter," opens atthe Palace Theatre.

Gabin's title role as a regene rated criminal of unpredictable emotional moods surpasses even the French film portrayals which established him as first actor of his country and a dramatic star of worldwide reputation.

Supporting Gabin is one of the most imposing groups of male players ever assembled, including Richard Whorf, Allyn Joslyn Peter Van Eyck, John Qualen, Eddie Quillan, Ralph Morgan and others, while Ellen Drew has the important femnine lead.

Under masterful direction by Julien Duvivier, who also was producer and wrote the screen play, no less than a dozen strong characterizations are offered by the impressive cast.

GREAT SUSPENSE

Suspence is marked from the outset of the story, when Gabin parely escapes the guillotine in the bombing of a French prison. Freed, he assumes the identity of a sergeant who has been killed in action, and makes his way to Africa to join the Fighting
