Teacher Evaluation, Parking Areas Senate's Objectives for Semester

By Kevin P. Cox

Student Senate President Byran Jackson said that developing an adequate teacher evaluation form that would be available to students and providing students with additional temporary parking spaces are two of the senate's main objectives for the semester. He also said that he hoped the Constitutional Revision Commission will develop an improved constitution for ET students.

Harry James

Set for Feb. 11

The sound of the big band will fill the University Auditorium at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 11, when the Commerce Rotary Club and the Student Activities Board present Harry James and his New Swingin' Band in concert.

Barry Mangels, Student Center program director, said tickets are $3 in advance and $3.50 at the door. Tickets can be purchased at the Activities Desk in the Student Center, Security State Bank, First National Bank in Commerce, or from any Rotary Club member, or at the door. Doors will open at 7:30 p.m.

Harry James, known for his trumpet playing, began playing with local orchestras in Beaumont, Tex., at age 15. He soon obtained engagements in Dallas and Galveston and was later signed to play with Ben Pollack's orchestra.

James then began playing with Benny Goodman's band and in 1939, he left Goodman's band and started his own band with Goodman's financial support.

At age 23, he became the band leader of Harry James and his Music Makers. The band received national fame in 1941 with a rendition of "You Made Me Love You."

In 1943, James married pin-up girl Betty Grable.

While under contract to 20th Century-Fox Studios, James appeared in "Do You Love Me?" with Maureen O'Hara and Dick Haymes and in "I'll Get By," "Springtime in the Rockies," "Best Foot Forward," "Two Girls and a Sailor" and "Bathing Beauty." In addition to acting in movies, James has appeared in several dramatic roles on television.

The senate will be studying various types of teacher evaluation forms this semester and it plans to develop a system in which the USA would provide forms for students to fill out. These completed forms would be available for other students to consult. Jackson said that the senate "needs to restore student's faith in the forms."

Recently, Jackson sent a letter to Sam McCord, Director of ET Security, requesting that five 30-minute parking spaces in the North Education parking lot be made available for student use. These additional spaces would allow students a place to park while going to the infirmary, according to Jackson.

McCord said that he and Security Captain Max Clay will study the proposal and make suggestions to the traffic committee concerning the feasibility of the idea. If the traffic committee does approve the proposal, the spaces would not be made available until the fall semester. McCord said that any student with comments concerning the proposed parking areas should make recommendations to the traffic committee.

Jackson said that he wants the Constitutional Revision Committee to develop a constitution which would be simpler and easier for students to understand. He added that he wants the USA to have more than an advisory function on campus.

There needs to exist on campus a system of student government which is more responsive to students' needs and wants, he added.

He also expressed the idea that there is a need for more programs at ET that inform students of what the office of Student Affairs has made available this semester. He added that a program on today's job market will be presented by Mike Clay, Director of Placement, on Feb. 19, following that night's senate meeting. The program will take place in the board room of the Student Center and will be moved to Room 221 in the Business Administration Building, if additional space is needed.

Jackson said that the senate is also currently studying the cost of having a bulletin board built between the Student Affairs Building and the Student Center which would inform students of current activities taking place on campus.

Almost immediately after the Student Senate was called to order at its Wednesday night meeting, Jan.

29, Senate President Byran Jackson announced that the senate would adjourn and not conduct any business until its next meeting at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 5.

Jackson explained that he wants all persons planning to apply for the 11 vacant senate positions to have time to apply and allow the Rules and Judiciary Committee sufficient time to interview and nominate senate applicants. There are two freshman, three junior, two senior and four graduate senate vacancies.

The final date for students to apply is Friday, Jan. 31, in the United Students Association office located on the second floor of the Student Center.

Jackson said that he wants to start business next week with a full senate and be in a position to assign senators to fill vacant committee positions. Most committees, except for the Rules and Judiciary Committee, are inoperable. At next week's senate meeting, the senate will vote on the senate nominations.

In an interview with Jackson earlier this week, he said that there is a rapid turn-over in the senate due to senators graduating, transferring or not having time to work in the senate.

CAMPUS SCOPE

Goodwin Composition Wins Award

Syd Goodwin, ET graduate student, has been awarded the $1,000 Max Winkler Award for his composition of a one-movement work designed for college-level band.

The $1,000 award, sponsored by the College Band Directors National Association, will be presented to Goodwin at the CBDNA national conference to be held Feb. 5-8, in Berkeley, Calif. Goodwin's composition entitled "Whose Ancient Sun," will be performed at the conference by the Southern Oregon University Band.

According to Goodwin, the CBDNA considered entries with instrumentation that were playable by a college band.

Goodwin dedicated "Whose Ancient Sun" to Wendell Evanston, director of instrumental music at Henderson State College, and Francis McBeth, composer and composition instructor at Ouchita University in Arkadelphia, Ark.

He composed the piece as an undergraduate at Henderson State College in Arkadelphia, Ark.

Goodwin is now teaching music theory as an ET graduate assistant.

Application Deadline Set

The last date to send in spring and summer applications for Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG) is Saturday, March 15, according to Mrs. Betty Castleberry, coordinator of Student Employment. Mrs. Castleberry said that ET was appropriated $325,000 in government funds for the school year and there are currently 560 students receiving grants.

BEOG is a federal government program for freshman and sophomore students. To be eligible, a student must be a United States citizen or permanent resident who enrolled after April 1, 1973 full time. The grants range from $100 to $900 for the school year and are based upon financial need.

In determining need, such factors as family income and assets, family size, number of family members in

Radio ETSU
To Go on Air

"All systems are go" as the on-the-air date draws near for ET's cable radio station.

Monday, Feb. 3, is the date set for the first broadcast from the cable station. The station will have ETSU as call letters and will be carried on Channel 3 in cooperation with TelePrompser Cable-TV of Commerce. The second station, KETR-FM, is tentatively scheduled to go on-the-air on March 24.

According to Kris Miller, student program director for both stations, the cable station will be on the air 1-6 p.m. weekdays. Miller said that the station may expand to longer hours and weekends, depending on the progress of the practicum students who work on the station.

Miller has worked at the campus radio station at West Texas State University, at several stations in the Amarillo area, and at KGVL in Greenville.

Miller said that the future cable station may produce special shows such as all progressive rock or all soul on the weekends.

The format of the station is Top 40/Rock. There will be 45 minutes of ETSU music and monologue by the announcer each hour, five minutes of news and weather at the top of the hour, furnished by United Press International, and 10 minutes of commercials each hour.

postsecondary school, and social security and veterans' special educational benefits are taken into consideration.

A grant for the summer is only given to a student who has not received an award for the fall or spring semester. New application forms for fall and spring 1975-76 are available in the Work-Study Office in the Student Affairs Building.

Wallin Receives Honor

David Wallin, art graduate assistant, received an honorable mention for a slide of his painting "Hard Knox" at the American Contemporary Arts and Crafts Slide Library Second Annual National Art Slide Competition in West Palm Beach, Fla. on Jan. 18.

Richard A. Madigan, director of Norton Gallery and School of Art in Palm Beach, judged the 572 slide entries on content as representative of the original art, rather than the slide itself.

Wallin won the first of seven honorable mentions in the painting category of the contest. Last year, in the first annual contest, Wallin won second place.

Painting on Display

Selected paintings from students in Art 316, Advanced Drawing, will be on display in the Art Building hallway until Friday, Feb. 7. The exhibits on display were selected by Bruce Tibbetts, art faculty, and the students in the Art 316 class.

Tibbetts said he thought that it was "useful for students to see their work in exhibitions" because that will be their main exposure when they become professional artists.

Speech, Hearing Clinic Offers Free Services

By Debi Patterson

Many students are not aware that ET has a Speech and Hearing Clinic that offers a full range of services to those with speech, language or hearing problems. All of these services are free, not only to ET students but to members of the outside community also, according to Dr. Paul Roosevelt, director.

The center is staffed by Dr. Roosevelt, Carl McGovern and Mrs. Bevin Turner. As well as teaching a full load of courses, they supervise the speech and hearing therapy students in the clinic who do counseling and therapy work.

Undergraduate speech and hearing majors are required to have a minimum of 200 hours of clinical therapy work, and graduate students are required to do an additional 150 hours. They are usually 100-125 speech and hearing therapy majors each year, according to Dr. Roosevelt.

As a part of orientation, each new undergraduate student who enters ET is given a brief hearing and speech screening. "Basically this is to try to identify those students with potential speech or hearing problems so that we can do further testing," Roosevelt explained.

Those with problems are sent a follow-up letter by the orientation office and invited to make arrangements to come into the clinic on a voluntary basis. They are then re-tested, and if they do not pass this test they are given counseling or therapy or referred to medical people if the problem is more serious, he added.

In addition to this, "Quite a little bit of hearing testing is done at the request of medical doctors in the surrounding area," according to Dr. Roosevelt, "not only testing for diagnosis but also testing for hearing aid evaluation and for what aids would be useful."

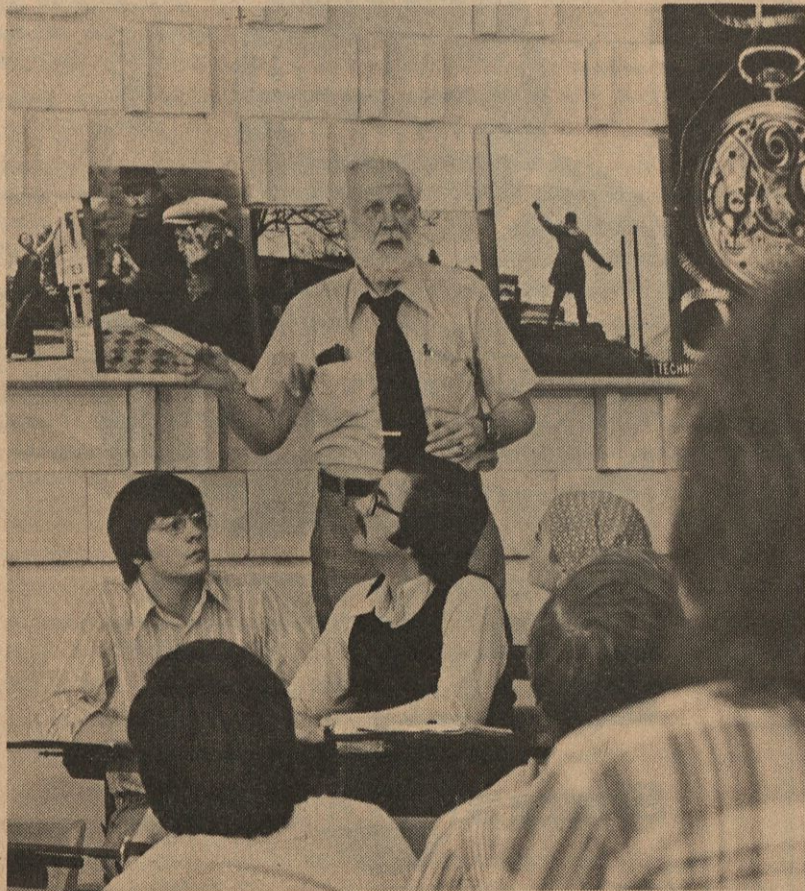

Currently the clinic has 51 clients receiving therapy in such areas as articulation, cleft palate, aphasia, stuttering and voice problems. "We are also working with one person right now who has had his larynx removed, and we are teaching him esophageal speech," Roosevelt said.

Some of the center's clients travel 50 miles several times a week for therapy, and even a few come from Oklahoma, he said.

This gives the center a load of 106 therapy hours per week outside of classes and instruction.

Dr. Roosevelt also said that some of the students go to nursing homes in the area and to the Hunt County Opportunity Center in Greenville to give therapy.

Students majoring in speech and hearing therapy may also obtain Teacher Certification to teach therapy in public schools, according to Dr. Roosevelt. He also added that most of the students at ET get their certification.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Publications Study Urged

Last semester I labored here as an assistant editor, and it was a labor of love. But throughout the semester, whenever I told a student or faculty member that I worked for The East Texan, I invariably got hit with a list of complaints about the student newspaper.

I was told that the paper always looked the same; that it always contained the same old dry predictable articles on the same old predictable topics. It was told there weren't enough interesting feature stories in the paper, and never anything controversial.

Some people said that there was too much news about sports and Greeks; others said that there wasn't enough. Many said that there were never enough photos in the paper and that there should be more artwork.

International students complained about the lack of coverage of their activities. Department heads and faculty said their departments and projects weren't getting enough attention.

Some students said that the Student Senate wasn't worth reading about, while senators complained about too little or biased coverage. That hurt me, because I was covering the senate beat myself.

Some of the criticisms I agreed with; others I thought were silly. Still, I felt that people have a right to speak out about the quality of the press and the press needs to be as responsive to the needs of its readership as possible.

So, I took the complaints I had heard to the Student Publications Committee on Nov. 25. I also suggested that a scientific sample survey be conducted, perhaps by a marketing class, to determine student and faculty opinion concerning The East Texan's appearance, types of articles, and style. Perhaps a survey of this sort could help in determining if The East Texan is meeting the needs of the campus or is in need of an overhaul.

The members of the committee heard me out graciously and announced later that a meeting will be called "early in the spring semester" to examine East Texan policies.

I certainly hope that this meeting will soon be called and that the many critics of The East Texan will come to this meeting to help us try to improve The East Texan. If you critics really want a better paper, this will be your chance.

I hope, too, that the meeting will be made a J-100 seminar in order to assure the presence of as many journalism students as possible.

The East Texan is the official student newspaper of ET, but it is also the laboratory for ET journalism students. The paper adheres to a fairly strict style that was formulated by former East Texan editors with guidance of the journalism faculty. The style, which guides the mechanics of layout and editing used by student editors cannot be easily changed. The style used by The East Texan is not the only way possible to edit a newspaper; it is one way.

It may be that The East Texan is the best newspaper possible at ET. On the other hand, you, the students and faculty, may have some constructive ideas for changes that could greatly benefit the appearance, style, and content of The East Texan. The promised open meeting and a sample survey could tell us more about the kind of newspaper you want.

15 Students Chosen For March Play

Fifteen students have been chosen for the cast of "Once Upon A Time . . ." a graduate thesis production set for early March, according to Jan Whitaker, University Playhouse business manager.

The director of the play is Gayle Harper, Brownsville graduate. The play is an "experiment in theatre games and improvisations. Although aimed at adults, children will also enjoy it. It is an exercise in creativity for actors, as well as directors," according to Miss Harper.

Miss Harper also explained that the story line for the play will come from works that have already been written, but not in a dramatic form. "The audience may expect mime and some dance, as well as straight theatre," she added.

Miss Harper was a member of the cast of the Forum Art's production of "Look Homeward Angel" last November, and was one of the directors in the Speech-Drama Department's high school drama workshop last summer.

Howard Payne quarterback Rick Worley was selected by the San Francisco 49ers, also in the 12 round. Beamon and Worley, plus Texas A&I's Done Hardeman, were the only LSC gridders chosen through the 12th round.

LSC Tourney Slated; Lions Almost In

Mathematically speaking, ET's basketball team has all but secured a berth in the Lone Star Conference Tournament to be played Feb. 23-25, to determine the LSC champion. All the Lions need are two more LSC wins and, regardless of whatever else happens, they are in.

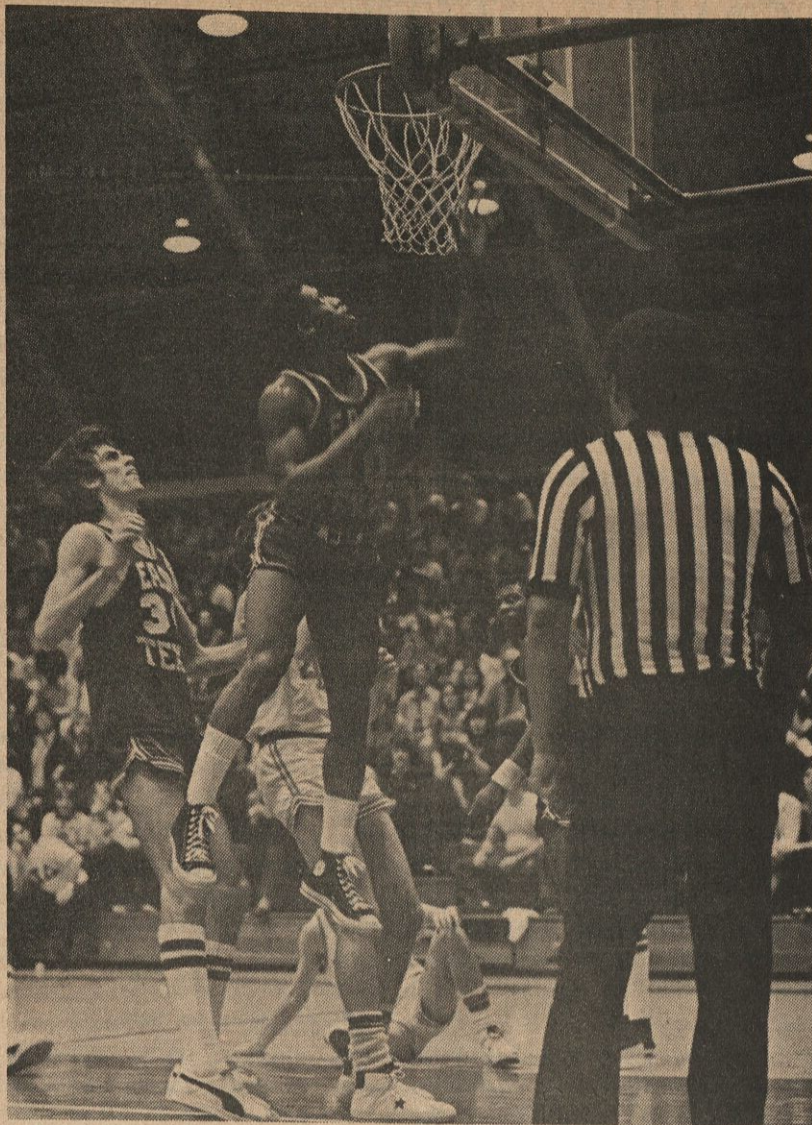

Because the top three teams from both the East and West Zone enter the championship tournament, and since Stephen F. Austin is on probation and not allowed to enter, ET is all but a certainty to be playing for the LSC title.

ET boasts a 6-3 LSC record, second to Southwest Texas' 7-1 mark in the East Zone. Sam Houston is 3-5 and Texas A&I stands at 1-7. A&I has six more games to go and would have to win all of them, and ET would have to lose all its remaining games for the Javs to make the tourney. Should ET win two more LSC games, the Lions automatically grab a spot in the tournament.

West Zone teams who appear to have solid shots at getting to the LSC Tournament are Angelo State, Howard Payne and Abilene Christian.

O'NEAL TARRANT, ET's number two scorer with a 23.0 point per game average, goes up for an offensive rebound in the record setting 130-75 win over Texas A&I Monday, Jan. 27. Pat Laue watches.

IN SECOND MATCH

Lions To Host Austin College

After Monday night's record-setting 130-75 win over Texas A&I's Javelinas, ET's Lions appear ready to take on anybody in the conference, but they'll have to wait.

The next stop on the schedule is a 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 6, non-conference bout with Austin College at the Field House, capping a four game homestand.

In that homestand the Lions are 2-1, dropping the first game to Stephen F. Austin, 82-78, then downing Southwest Texas 86-75, and crushing Texas A&I.

ET has played Austin College once this season, winning 85-55.

"We played them in the Cotton Bowl Tournament in Dallas back in December and beat 'em bad," Lion coach Jim Gudger said.

"But that could hurt us," he added. "Sometimes it's hard to get the boys up for a team you've already beaten like that."

Gudger had no problems at all getting his team up for A&I Monday. The Lions could do no wrong, and on the same night A&I could do nothing right.

"We played 12 people in both halves, but I wouldn't tell our guys to just go out there and freeze the ball. Some of them haven't got to play much in the close games and when they get in there they want to score some points."

In the last two games the Lions have looked more like the conference championship favorites they were picked to be in the preseason.

"We traditionally finish strong," Gudger stated. "My teams have always put on a strong charge at the end, but this team was expected to start strong and finish with a power sweep. Maybe now we're on the road to doing that."

Evidently pleased with how things are shaping up, Gudger is optimistic about the immediate future. He is not, however, taking any future wins for granted.

"I just hope that we play as well in the rest of our games as we did in the last two and a half."

After the non-conference meeting with Austin College, the Lions travel to Huntsville for a 7:30 p.m. Tuesday- Feb. 4 LSC game with Sam Houston. The Bearkats are 3-5 in conference play and 9-12 for the season.

Probable starters for Saturday's game are Hugo Cabrera, Nate Granger, O'Neal Tarrant, Pat Laue and either Lonnie Jones or Stan Witherspoon.

Granger still holds the team lead in scoring and rebounding, sinking 23.1 points per game and grabbing 9.9 rebounds. Right behind in the scoring is Tarrant with 23.0 points a contest. Cabrera is hitting for 14.9 ppg and is second in gathering caroms with a 7.6 average.

Granger is also the top percentage shooter, claiming a .539 norm. Tarrant and Cabrera are close behind with .519 and .514 percentages. Granger has scored 485 points, Tarrant has bucketed 484 and Cabrera has sunk 314 points.

Lion Cagers Rally Late To Beat Eastfield, 60-52

By Holly Cooper

The East Texas women's varsity basketball team came out of a mid-game slump in the final three minutes of play to beat Eastfield Junior College, 60-52, Tuesday night at Whitley Gym.

Referring to the mid-game slump, which has happened in previous games, Knause said, "Maybe physically we are not in the shape we should be because we let down. I don't know if it's physical or mental but I don't think that it's physical because most of the women can go without too much problem."

Sheila Dicky and Yalanda Jones ate their share of victory cake following the game as they tied for high scoring honors with 16 points each.

Charlet Humphrey was high scorer for Eastfield with 19 points and scored two of the Lion points. With 8:52 remaining in the game, Humphrey, in a scramble for the ball, gained control and in the confusion of the game, laid up two points for her opponents which gave East Texans a 47-46 edge over Eastfield.

Shooting picked up for the Lions in the second half as they hit 13 of 37 attempts for 35 per cent, compared to their 32 per cent, 14 out of 43 attempts, in the first half. The Lions sank six of 16 attempted free throws for 37 per cent.

"Eastfield played exceptionally well against any defense we played," Knause said, and added, "I wish our defense could do the same."

The Lions, 4-3 for the season, travel to Stephenville this weekend to participate in the Tarleton Tournament, a single elimination consolation tournament.

Following the Tarleton Tournament, the Lions return home to host Richland at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 4, at Whitley Gym.

Soil Reclamation Under Study

By Nora N. Garza

Conservation-conscious strip mining companies are careful to leave exhausted mining areas as unblemished as when they started to work, according to Glen A. Austin, chemistry doctoral student.

Austin is involved in a one-year study of soil reclamation following strip mining at the Monticello lignite mining area in Titus County, approximately 50 miles from Commerce. The study is financed by a $9,776 grant awarded to ET by the consortium of Texas Power & Light, Dallas Power & Light and the Texas Electric Service Co.

According to Austin, samples of the soil will be brought from the mining site to ET to be analyzed chemically for both major nutrients and trace elements by atomic absorption and selective ion electrode techniques. Any change in the soil will be recorded by Austin.

"The mining company tries to restore the area as near to the original terrain as possible," Austin said. He added that if lakes were disrupted, they are reconstructed, and if grassy areas are replanted. The animal life is land and woods were mowed, they also checked in the reclaimed area for reinhabitation.

A similar project has been established in Fairfield, Tex., and restoration has proved to be successful, according to Dr. Moses Attrep, chemistry faculty. He added that grass crops superior to the original crops thrive over land that was once mined, and rodent traps show that animals are reentering the reclaimed area.

Chemistry is not the only science involved in reclamation projects, he added.

The Fairfield project has an environmental research center where studies of changes in land, air and water caused by strip mining is conducted by graduate students from leading universities in the southwest.

Studies at the center include an inventory of the vegetation and animal population of the area to aid in planning revegetation and animal repopulation. The aquatic populations in the lake, the kind of trees to replant, as well as soil analysis are studied at the center.

5 Thefts Reported

Five thefts have been reported to ET Security since classes for the spring semester began Monday, Jan. 20.

A wind gauge was stolen from the Agriculture Department's quarter horse farm. The 3-foot gauge was last seen on Dec. 15 and was found to be missing Jan. 20.

On Tuesday, Jan. 21, a window of a Mustang parked at Hubbell Hall was broken out. Damage is estimated at $100.

On Wednesday, Jan. 22, a sample class ring was taken from the University Book Store. No value was given in the loss.

Also on Wednesday, a red, 3-speed bike, valued at $120, was taken from the courtyard of Smith Hall.

On Thursday, Jan. 23, a textbook, valued at $12.50, was taken from Room 106 of the Education South Building.

A non-student was picked up by ET Security on a DWI charge at 2 a.m., Saturday, Jan. 25. The suspect was taken to the Commerce Police station for a breathalyzer test and held there overnight. ET Security transferred the prisoner to Hunt County Jail the next morning.

Also on Saturday, a battery was taken from a Mustang parked in the Whitley Hall parking lot and ET Security recovered a plaster owl stolen last semester. The owl was found in a dormitory room.

Higher Utilities To Raise

Fall Term Housing Rates

University housing rates did not go up this semester, but because of a 15 per cent hike in utility rates, rates will also influence housing rates, according to Dr. Don Pope, University Housing director.

He added that possible state legislation to raise the salaries of teachers will also influence housing rates.

Pope said that the rumor of a housing rate increase this semester was not true and that there has never been an increase at mid-term since he has been director. However, he said that the increased rates of lights, gas and telephone service will affect housing rates for next term. Water and cable-TV rates remain the same, he added.

If the legislature increases teachers' pay, housing rates will have to rise to insure that the housing staff is not underpaid in comparison with the faculty. According to Pope, the housing personnel salaries are not funded by the state.

Brass Choir To Perform

The ET Brass Choir will present a recital during the Texas Music Educators Association Convention at 4:15 p.m. Friday, Feb. 14, in the Dallas Convention Center.

Directed by Conrad Bauschka, the ensemble will perform works from the Renaissance through the Avant-Garde Periods. Bauschka has played professionally with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra and the New York Metropolitan Opera.

Graduates Serve As Interns

Two new internship positions in local and regional agencies of government have been obtained by students in the ET Master of Public Administration Program.

James Barrington of Linden will be working in the city manager's office in Texarkana, Ark. Larry Jack Sheffield of Como will be working as an administrative intern at the East Texas Council of Governments and the Governor's Public Service Intern Program.

These new positions bring to six the total number of internship positions that have been obtained by students in the public administration program since the fall semester.

Other students in the program have served in Dallas, Greenville, Commerce and Paris.

According to Dr. Richard Feld, political science faculty and MPA program adviser, the number of students enrolled in the public administration program has doubled in the last year.

Dr. Feld explained that the program is designed to train students for careers in public service. Students who have worked at public service jobs or are currently employed in that field are not required to work as interns, he added.

'Sleeper' To Be Shown

Cinemedia will present the movie "Sleeper" at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 2, in the American Ballroom of the Student Center. Sponsored by ET, the Three-event competition will consist of jazz, high kick and prop routines. A team receiving first division ratings in all three categories will be given a sweepstakes trophy, Lockhart said.

Contest judges include: Betty Berry, Benton, Ark.; Lee Spencer, Conway, Ark.; Linda Muller, Commerce; Frank Garza, Texarkana; Goodloe Lewis, Sherman; and Dr. Neill Humfeld, music faculty.

Spectators are welcome, Lockhart said, and admission will be 50 cents.
