3 Hours' Work Goes into Makeup

By Jo Ann Massie

Most women use makeup to make them look younger, but ET student Glenda Donley is doing just the opposite. For the week of Feb. 20-25, at least, she will be adding 70 years to her appearance.

Ms. Donley, Dallas junior, will be appearing as Nanny in the University Playhouse production of the Pulitzer Prize-winning drama "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds." The part is that of a 90-year-old boarder in the Hunsdorfer household, and to make this transformation will take the actress more than three hours of work each night during the play's run.

The actress begins the change with her face. First she applies putty to reshape her facial structure. Her nose becomes more pointed and sagging jowls and pouches around her eyes appear. This reshaping process takes at least one hour. Latex is then applied to harden the putty.

Next comes stage makeup to accent the new features by providing shadows and highlight lines. Heavy lines are drawn around the eye and mouth area to suggest deep wrinkles. This step is the quickest, requiring only about 15 minutes.

Further skin aging is provided by the application of three layers of latex. After each layer is applied the actress contorts her face to stretch the latex as it dries. When she relaxes her face, the stretched latex wrinkles. This process requires an hour to complete.

The final step is to apply pancake makeup to achieve the desired skin color. She is then ready to go through a similar process on her neck and hands—another 45 minutes of work.

The result is a complete, major transformation of her appearance.

According to Dr. Curtis L. Pope, head, Speech and Drama Department, the use of latex makeup is not new in the department, but "this is perhaps the most complex makeup job an actor has done here."

Ms. Donley explained that she auditioned for this part in the play because of the makeup challenge it presented. "Nanny doesn't even speak in the play," she pointed out. "Because of her advanced age, she neither speaks nor sees well, and she is almost oblivious to her surroundings."

A minor character in the play's action, Nanny is nevertheless important. Director Joe Mack Asberry, Floyd graduate, calls her "an overt manifestation of the death and decay in the household." Ms. Donley sees her as a kind of mirror image of Beatrice, the play's central figure, who feels uncared for and half alive.

The actress has found that once she is in full makeup, capturing the mannerisms and other movements of a 90-year-old comes easily. "The minute I start putting on the makeup, I start feeling like Nanny," she says. "But the face I create is actually a combination of faces I've seen." To prepare for the part, she observed elderly people on the street, poured through magazines and finally drew her own sketch of how she thought Nanny would look.

This interest in character makeup began while Ms. Donley was a stu-

Dichter Slated For Forum Arts

By Debi Patterson and Colette Hilliard

Dr. Ernest Dichter, called "the father of motivational research," will present the semester's second Forum Arts program at 9:30 a.m., Monday, Feb. 17, in the University Auditorium.

The program is being jointly sponsored by the Forum Arts committee and the College of Business.

Dichter, who received his Ph.D. in psychology from the University of Vienna in 1934, will speak on "Motivational Behavior," the subconscious compulsions that move human beings.

At 10:30 a.m. the College of Business will honor Dichter with a reception.

At 1:30 p.m. an informal feedback session with Dichter will be held in Room 221 of the Business Administration Building.

After immigrating to the United States from Austria in 1933, Dichter was involved in market research for various clients, including Ivory Soap, Chrysler Corp., and the Columbia Broadcasting System, until he established the Institute for Motivational Research, Inc. in New York in 1946. Dr. Trezzie Pressley, head, Marketing-Management Department, said, Dichter's $1 million-a-year research organization, the Institute for Motivational Research, Inc., in New York, has a staff of 65 psychologists, economists, and statisticians and maintains nine other United States and foreign offices, Pressley said. The institute charges $10,000 to $60,000 for a complete study, depending on the amount of interviewing required, according to The Wall Street Journal.

Although Dichter sold the institute last year to Lehigh Valley Industries Inc., a New York based conglomerate, he is still the center's president, the Journal said.

Dichter

Dr. Dichter has aroused "more controversy than any other figure engaged in applying the findings of social science to the study of consumer buying habits," Pressley said.

He added that Dichter's premise is "that the manufacturer of a product or the purveyor of a service must constantly keep the consumer in mind. He must create the image of the product so that it will appeal to the purchaser's hidden motivation."

However, according to the Wall Street Journal, many people involved in advertising research consider his theories "nonsense."

According to Moneysworth, The Consumer Newsletter, Dichter is no villain because he has used motivational research to help people to stop smoking, get men to donate blood more readily, and get people to donate to various charities.

In an interview with The Wall Street Journal, Dichter said, "We're not holding a gun to the customer's head. I don't feel bad, and I don't think I'm using any below-the-belt techniques."

Dichter's techniques include the "depth interview," a lengthy, rambling conversation aimed at obtaining attitudes and feelings as well as simple choice or preference; the projective test, which allows the respondent to project his real feelings about a subject; and "motivational theater" in which members of the institute's consumer panel act out their attitudes toward products they have used, Pressley added.

Clinic Facilities

Get Improvements

ET's infirmary has opened additional space and added new equipment to handle students faster and more efficiently, according to Mrs. Jo Boothby, head RN.

The infirmary is making preparation to open another examination room. Necessary space was made available by clearing out old medical records that the infirmary was required to keep for five years. A new examination table has also been added.

Along with the improvements, the infirmary is having its x-ray machine and x-ray film development tank repaired. When the x-ray equipment is operational, the infirmary will have the necessary equipment to take care of students with broken bones, according to Mrs. Boothby.

Other renovations to the infirmary included repairs on the building's exterior and painting of the x-ray room and the kitchen.

When referring to the facilities the infirmary presently has, Mrs. Boothby said, "What we have is reasonably adequate for the services we perform, but we would like a lab technician so that we could offer lab services."

Black Awareness Emphasized

A play entitled "Kind to Remember" was to be performed here by 35 black North Texas State University students Thursday night, as the conclusion of "Black Emphasis Week" on campus.

The play, sponsored by the Multi-Culture Center, was "a black-oriented Reader's Theatre performed, directed, and written by black students," according to J. W. Hutson, North Texas State University graduate and play director.

Also included in the week's activities was a Tuesday night program entitled "Black Culture on Parade," presented by Zeta Phi Beta, social sorority.

The program presented the Black man "as he enlightened society to the high caliber of abilities and talents that many Blacks possess," said Mrs. Debra Garland, narrator of the program.

Thursday night, Delta Sigma Theta, public service sorority, presented "The Revolution Will Not Be Televised" in which segments of the black man's development were portrayed including slavery, freedom, search for identity, revolution, and the black man today.

"The purpose of Black History Week is to call attention to the neglected facts about Afro-American history and literature," said Dr. James Byrd, literature-languages faculty.

Byrd said the U.S. should not always have a week set aside to emphasize black history. "As soon as American history gives sufficient space to black history and as soon as American literary publications give a rightful place to Black literature, there will be no need for one week set aside to call attention to it," Byrd explained. "Right now it is a good thing."

Byrd concluded, "Just as every week should be brotherhood week for Christians, in every week there should be recognition of black achievement among students and scholars."

Black Emphasis Week at ET has had various meanings for different people. MCC Director Dorothy Wilson said, "It makes me and my people (black culture) become aware of who did things in the past. If our culture sees the great things that blacks have done before, it will make them want to do great things, too."

Linda Lofton, Neches sophomore, said, "Black History Week is an opportunity for everyone to review black culture." Miss Lofton added, "it (Black History Week) gives us a chance to understand and respect black history more."

According to Robert Loyde, Memphis graduate student, a knowledge of black history is essential because it is "important to be aware where we came from and the contribution we made to America." Loyde, who works with the Multi-Cultural Center, said that his work gives him a "chance to view a wider perspective of Black culture especially in music."

APO To Provide Blood Donors Cards

Any person who gave blood during the Fall 1974 ET Blood Drive held Nov. 20 and 21 and has not received his membership card from Wadley Blood Bank can contact Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity, through the Office of Student Development, according to Roger Crouch, blood club chairman.

Donor members, names are on file at both Wadley in Dallas and on campus with APO, according to Scott Miller, blood club co-chairman. "However, blood club members have only to contact Wadley or APO to have blood credits released for the donors or his immediate families use," Miller said.

ET Radio Receives Ad Clients

By Willis Johnson

Radio ETSU kicked off its commercial sales drive by getting two local advertising accounts, according to Kris Miller, student program director.

Unlike KETR-FM, which will begin broadcasting March 24, Radio ETSU is a non-profit station. Gerald Smith of ETSU's sales department is working in sales as a one-hour radio practicum course requirement. Miller said that there are five other students working in sales.

According to Carolyn Redwine, ETSU traffic and continuity director, the rates were developed from a study of a survey of similar college radio stations. ETSU has four rates each for 30 and 60 second depending on the number of times the ad is run a day.

Robert Binder, advertising teacher in the Journalism-Graphic Arts Department, said the station's rates are "about right or maybe lower" for this area's market.

Binder said, "This market hasn't been exploited enough," and he added "people are not aware that things they want are right here." Binder also said that the way to make people aware is to advertise.

"It's filling a gap that's needed. . . we need a station to represent Commerce and the University," Binder said, in reference to radio ETSU.

Binder said that there is enough room for a station like ETSU in this market.

According to Jerry Erickson, radio ETSU engineer, the money from commercials is being put back into the station in several ways.

Some money will go for record services and the other money will help pay expenses on feeding the cable station into the university's dorms. Erickson said that the hook-up to the dorms will allow students with AM radios to pick up the station.

According to Miss Redwine the station is a learning process for the students as well as a money-making operation.

Vote for Water Bonds

ET students eligible to vote can join other Commerce citizens in putting Commerce on its way to having a much needed, long awaited independent water supply by voting for the water bond Tuesday, Feb. 18. If the Water Bond Election passes, Commerce will receive $1.65 million toward the construction of its own $6 million water treatment plant and water lines to Lake Tawakoni.

The funds, to be borrowed through the Texas Water Development Board at an interest rate of approximately four per cent, are needed to supplement the $4.35 million water bonds passed in 1972. The additional funds are needed due to fuel and construction costs that have recently skyrocketed.

Passage of the bonds would give Commerce an independent water supply that would insure no more water shortages as the town has faced in the past. If Commerce voters delay the construction of a water treatment plant any longer, prices will continue to rise, making the prospect of the project at a later date even more costly than today.

If the project fails, Commerce will be forced to rely on its fastly depleting water wells and eventually become completely dependent on treated water from Greenville at much higher rates than if Commerce had its own supply. Commerce residents would perhaps later even be financing a new Greenville treatment plant and still be without its own plant. The question also arises of the assurance that Greenville would keep supplying Commerce with treated water in decades to come when their own needs will greatly increase.

ET students and other Commerce voters are urged to vote Tuesday at City Hall for the water bonds, so that the dream of an independent water supply can be realized. Failure of the bonds' passage could only mean an insecure future for Commerce and assuredly a more expensive bond in future years. Commerce's continued growth depends on an adequate, dependable water supply that the new water treatment plant could bring. Vote for the Water Bonds Tuesday, Feb. 18.

Missouri 'Show Me' Club Shows ET Math Students

The Missouri Math Club, Missouri for "Show Me," is set up to help any student who is having trouble in math classes on an individual basis, according to Dr. Dale R. Bedgood, head, Mathematics Department.

Mathematics faculty and graduate assistants are assigned to Room S-123 in the Hall of Sciences to tutor students from Math 111, 112, 121, 122, 131, 132, 175, and 218 during periods 3, 4, 7, 8, and 9 on Mondays and Wednesdays, and periods 5, and 6, on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The Missouri Club is not really a club at all, Dr. Bedgood explained, but simply a service offered to the students by the Mathematics Department every semester.

Government Office Investigates Loans

DALLAS (AP)—An accounting review of federal Guaranteed Student Loan Program offices across the nation has become a "high priority assignment," according to a spokesman for the U.S. Office of Education.

"We're checking controls on the program, throughout the country, particularly where cash is handled," the Dallas Times Herald said it was told by Sanford Winston of Washington.

Winston said the review was prompted by allegations of misuse of funds in the Dallas office of the loan program, which administers the program in neighboring states.

"The secretary of Health, Education and Welfare was aware of the programs before the Dallas investigation broke. . .we want to make sure there is no potential for abuse," Winston said.

The FBI, state attorney general, and local district attorney also are conducting probes of the federal office and its operations.

Van Rush, a spokesman for the Dallas loan program office, said three supervisors and three collection agents employed in the local office are being kept out of the office until the investigation is completed.

"It is in their best interest" that they be kept out, Rush said.

"The Best of Ernie Kovacs," an hour-long videotape, will be shown from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday-Friday, Feb. 17-21 in the Founders Lounge on the second floor of the Student Center.

A comedy dealing with the television comedian, Kovacs, the inventor of the TV sight gag, the film is a parade of improbable and absurd situations. Included are sketches on Percy Dovetonsils, Mack the Knife Blackouts, The Nairobi Trio, The Swan Lake Ballet of the Apes and The Syncopated 1812 Overture.

Leisure Classes Overflow

Among the Leisure Learning courses being offered this spring, Picture Framing is one of several classes with waiting lists, while one class, Contemporary Organizational Behavior, has been closed due to lack of interest and another class, Quiltmaking, has been added.

The Picture Framing Course is being conducted by Dr. Otha Spencer, journalism-graphic arts faculty, in the Country Studio Farm Shop. The class is limited to five people and with a waiting list of 16 people, a second session may be conducted.

Other classes with a waiting list include Beginning Guitar, Folk Guitar and Better Living Through Behaviorism. The Self-Improvement Through Transactional Analysis class has been extended from 20 to 40 students, and has been moved to the Leadership Lounge of the Student Center to accommodate the larger class.

Quiltmaking will start Tuesday, March 25, in the Coffeeshouse of the Student Center from 7-9 p.m. The course will continue until April 15 and will be instructed by Mary Ann Williams. Students interested in learning the art of quiltmaking and the famous designs can register at the Activities Desk on the second floor of the Student Center.

Courses still open are Career Development; Conditioning for Men and Women; Drug Rap; The Metric System: Football and Apple Pie; Muscle Relaxation Group; Science Fiction Interest Group; Shakespeare Film Festival; Structure Fishing Using Depth Finder; Tablesitting for the Contemporary Bride; Weight Control Group; and Sell Your Organization.

Total enrollment for Leisure Learning is 210. Registration is still being conducted at the Activities Desk on the second floor of the Student Center, according to Roxie Valteau, Student Center program adviser. East Texas and Angelo State batted 1.000 per cent in their last two games and were rewarded with promotions from second to first place in their respective Lone Star Conference zones.

East Texas, 9-3 in LSC play, beat Southwest Texas, 74-70, in San Marcos to tie up the East Zone and then out-pointed Texas A&I, 104-91, to take the zone lead. SWT, 8-4, fell to a furious charge by Sam Houston, 69-64, and dropped to second place in the East.

Angelo State, 8-4, whipped Howard

Payne, 7-4, and then ran over Tarleton to move into the West Zone lead. Howard Payne had been the top team in the West. Abilene Christian, 7-4, defeated Sul Ross and maintained the tie for second in the zone.

Saturday night action in the LSC will see Texas A&I at Sam Houston, and SWT at Nacogdoches to battle the Lumberjacks. Should SFA beat SWT, East Texas automatically wins the East Zone title and gets a bye in the first round of the LSC Championship Basketball Tournament to be played at Brownwood Coliseum Feb. 23-25.

East Texas is off Saturday, Feb. 15, but cranks up the next Monday and hosts Sam Houston. An ET win would clinch the East Zone title for the Lions, regardless of what SWT does in its last two games.

Howard Payne travels to Abilene Monday, Feb. 17, Angelo goes to Alpine to play Sul Ross, Texas A&I plays SFA at Nacogdoches and Tarleton hosts Texas Lutheran in a non-conference game.

Angelo State hosts Abilene Christian Thursday, Feb. 20, East Texas goes to Nacogdoches to battle SFA, Howard Payne hosts Tarleton and Texas A&I hosts SWT.

Toll-Free Line Open For ET Information

800-492-2862 is a new toll-free telephone line installed in the Testing and Orientation Office that allows any interested person in Texas to gain immediate information about ET, according to Joe Helton, director of T&D.

The wats line has been in operation since Tuesday, Jan. 28. About four to six calls are received each day. The Testing and Orientation Office dispenses information concerning the educational programs and services offered by ET.

The Office also answers letters from prospective students or forwards them to the respective department.

The wats number was given in a supplement which appeared in the Sunday, Jan. 5th issue of the Dallas Morning News. The supplement had pictures and information about the ET campus.

The supplement also contained reply cards which could be mailed to ET to obtain information about the university. Numerous phone calls have been received concerning the supplement and over 100 reply cards have been received.

Joe Helton, director of testing and orientation, said that the expansion of the recruiting services gives ET a "personal approach to the student."

Earth Sciences Adds Courses
To Meet Demand in Geology

By Nora N. Garza

Jobs in the field of geology are in demand, according to Dr. W. R. McDaniel, head, Earth Sciences Department.

Dr. McDaniel said that recently the earth sciences major with a geology emphasis has become the most popular major in the department.

Two courses not offered for several years, "Environmental Meteorology" and "Geomorphology," are being offered this semester because of the demand for geology majors.

Dr. McDaniel said that the interest in geology has increased because of the demand for geologists caused by the energy crisis. Oil, coal, power and public utility companies are offering numerous jobs to geologists, according to Dr. McDaniel.

Dr. W. Farrin Hoover, earth sciences faculty, said that a geology student starts his studies by doing field work. He added that a student who plans to work with oil rigs learns to chase oil wells, set cores, and analyze samples of oil in labs.

Dr. Hoover, who worked for 25 years with a drilling company, Kewanee Interamericano, said that a geologist needs to be familiar with most of the fields of geology from mineralogy to oceanography.

"If I were an independent drilling company, I would not want a specialist. I would want someone who has a good over-all background in fields," Dr. Hoover said. He added that a geologist needs to be versatile.

Dr. Hoover said that the department is not a trade school that teaches the uses of instruments or equipment. But he added that the department does teach the basics of geology, and with this background a company can train geology students for any specific job.

Dr. Hoover said that some of the basics a student needs to learn include identifying rock surfaces and samples from wells, and posting these samples on maps or "stringing" contours.

Dr. McDaniel also said that earth science teachers are needed. "Since public schools have just begun to teach earth science, there is a shortage of qualified teachers," Dr. McDaniel said.

"Schools have to take biology or history teachers and make an earth science teacher out of them," he added.

Institution Awards
Given to Students

Institutional scholarships have been awarded for the spring semester, according to Miss Vanessa C. Lanier, scholarship director. The $125 scholarship checks can be picked up during the week of March 3-7, by coming by the Texas Opportunity Office in the Student Affairs Building. Almost 200 scholarships will be awarded and recipients are being notified by mail.

Institutional scholarships are awarded on the basis of financial need and academic standing. Students who applied for the Hinson-Hazlewood College Student Loan or the National Direct Student Loan are automatically considered for the scholarship and separate application is not required.

Freshmen with less than 12 semester hours, must score a minimum of 18 on the ACT examination or 800 on the SAT, to be eligible for the scholarship. Undergraduates must have 2.5 overall grade point averages and a 2.5 from the previous semester. Graduate students must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.5, and a 3.5 from the previous semester. All applicants must be full-time students.

Applications for the upcoming school year are not available. Miss Lanier said the forms were being updated and had not been received.

Free Services Offered By Family Planning Clinic

By Debbie West

The Hunt County Family Planning Clinic, 1701 Monroe, offers free services to ET students from 5-10 p.m., according to Mrs. Wanda Waldon, project director for the clinic.

The family planning clinic, which was previously located in the Norris Community, specializes in family planning and birth control counseling. Services offered by the clinic include a physical with pap smear, pregnancy testing, infertility counseling and contraceptives, Mrs. Waldon explained.

The center moved to its present location six months ago when it outgrew the facilities in the Norris Community, Mrs. Waldon said. The center is funded by HEW and receives state support. Doctors in Commerce and Wolfe City donate their time to the clinic on a rotating basis. The clinic is also staffed with one nurse and three lab technicians, Mrs. Waldon said. Interested persons do volunteer work at the clinic, she said, including members from the Commerce Psychology Club. The medical equipment and furniture for the center were also donated by citizens.

A volunteer doctor is only available to patients every other Monday or during what is known as a doctors' clinic, Mrs. Waldon explained. The other two Mondays are nurses' clinic and are for supplying refills and counseling.

A patient needs an appointment to see the doctor. Information may be obtained by phoning the center in Commerce at 886-8923 on Mondays or the Hunt County Family Planning Center in Greenville collect, 455-5958.

The center has seen a large patient increase since moving to the Monroe Street address, Mrs. Waldon said, and if the patient increase continues, the center will begin a doctors' clinic every Monday night. The center takes a maximum of 25 appointments for each doctors' clinic.

Join the third biggest family in the world.

Imagine an order of 22,000 priests and brothers in 73 countries around the world. (That's a pretty big family.)

But that's what the Salesians of St. John Bosco are all about — a large family of community-minded men dedicated to the service of youth. (And no one gets lost.)

In Italy in the 1800's a chance meeting between a poor priest and a street urchin served to create a movement of such success that it is still growing today. Don Bosco became the priest who brought youth back from the streets — and back to God.

He reasoned that a program of play, learn and pray would make useful citizens of the world. He crowded out evil with reason, religion and kindness in a (what was then unheard of) atmosphere of family.

The ideals of St. John Bosco are still with us today. His work goes on in boys clubs, technical and academic schools, guidance centers, summer camps and missions. And his very human approach is very evident in the family spirit of the Salesians. This is the way he wanted it. This is the way it is. The Salesian experience isn't learned — it's lived.
