Lions Capture Zone In 79-78 Thriller

By Rod Paasch

It is now fact that ET's Lions are the Lone Star Conference East Zone champions, following Monday night's hair-raising 79-78 win over Sam Houston State's Bearkats at the Field House.

The win was ET's second over SH this year, the other being a 73-57 decision in Huntsville two weeks ago. SH is 6-8 in LSC play and 11-16 for the season.

ET heads to Nacogdoches Thursday, Feb. 20, for the regular season finale with Stephen F. Austin. SFA, 17-8 for the season, is 11-1 in LSC play, but is on probation for recruiting violations and will not compete for the LSC title.

The Lions have won six consecutive games. SFA beat them last, 82-78, four weeks ago in Commerce.

The win gives ET an 18-8 season slate, more wins than anyone else in the conference, and an East Zone record of 10-3. Being East Zone champs, coach Jim Gudger's cagers automatically draw a bye in the first round of the LSC Championship Basketball Tournament in Brownwood Feb. 23-25.

The Lions play their first tournament game at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 24. If they lose, ET plays at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday for third place. If they win, ET plays in the championship bout at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Monday night's battle with Sam Houston was a thriller down to the tight-wire finish. The Lions had beaten SH by 16 points at Huntsville, but the Bearkats were a different team Monday.

Sam Houston was hot in the first half and jumped to a 39-37 half-time lead. The lead changed hands regularly, but the biggest margin all night was six points as the Lions held it twice.

Nate Granger, the game's leading scorer with 24 points and leading rebounder with 13, broke a 71-71 tie with an outside shot with 2:32 remaining in the game, putting ET ahead to stay, 73-71. He added four more points, including a crucial tip-in of a Larry McGhee free throw try, which proved to be the winning margin.

McGhee sank seven of nine free throws for his night's work, three of them coming in the last 1:08 and coupled with Granger's timely points, they kept SH out of the game.

Hugo Cabrera bucketed 22 points for the Lions and pulled down 10 rebounds while Pat Laue chipped away at the net for 14 points and six rebounds. O'Neal Tarrant pumped in 10 points but also threw in nine assists. Lonnie Jones added two points for ET.

An aggressive Lion defense kept Melvin Moore, Sam Houston's leading scorer, confined to nine points. James Holcombe took up the slack in the Bearkat offense, pouring in 21 points and grabbing 12 rebounds.

An estimated crowd of more than 4,000, ET's largest of the season, grew tense in the final moments of the game. Despite four Bearkat starters fouling out in the last six minutes, ET could not build a comfortable lead.

The Lions led by four, 79-75, with 11 seconds remaining, but the Bearkats nearly overcame that, falling short by one.

Mangels, 3 SAB Members Attend National Entertainment Conference

By Sheree Gambill

Barry Mangels, Student Center program director, and three ET students have returned from a week-long National Entertainment Conference in Washington D. C. One of the highlights of the conference was a surprise speech by President Gerald Ford. President Ford was introduced by comedian Bob Hope, another speaker at the conference.

Student Activity Board members attending were Mike Giarraputo, junior and vice chairman of the SAB Entertainment Committee; Janet Hayes, sophomore and chairman of the Entertainment Committee and Royal Mullins, senior and chairman of the Videotape Committee.

ET's representatives attended program workshops, viewed entertainment showcases and conferred with other universities and colleges on student activity programs. According to Mike Giarraputo, the NEC acts as a go-between with the promoters and agents of entertainers and the schools.

"The conference gives universities and colleges an opportunity to come together to discuss student activity programs, exchange ideas, and see what entertainment is available to them and at what price," explained Mangels.

In addition to films, sight-seeing, hearing speakers, talking to delegates from other schools and learning how to make block bookings, the delegates also attended luncheons highlighted by celebrity speakers. Jeb Stuart Magruder of Watergate fame and Redd Foxx spoke at the first luncheon. Bob Hope was given an award for being "Comedian of the Century."

At the showcases, emceed by Edmonds and Curley, the delegates saw personalities such as Doug Kershaw, Jim Stafford, Jimmy Walker, Grandpa Jones and Ted Mack.

The convention, held Feb. 6-12, was the largest ever conducted by the NEC with 500 universities and colleges participating.

ET's delegates financed their trip by taking the allotted money for one round-trip air fare and using it for gas. By driving the 1,400 mile trip, the SAB was able to send three student delegates instead of one.

APO Blood Drive To Begin Thursday

Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, will launch its Spring Blood Drive, 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 20, with a registration table in the Student Center to take pledges from prospective donors, according to Roger Crouch, blood drive chairman.

The blood drive, sponsored by APO, through Wadley Blood Bank of Dallas, will be 12 p.m.-7:30 p.m., Wednesday, March 5, and 10 a.m.-4 p.m., Thursday, March 6 in the Texas Ballroom of the Student Center.

"This drive is to accommodate those students and faculty members who, because of time or colds, or other limiting factors could not donate during the fall drive," Crouch said. The drive is open to anyone, including Commerce residents, he added.

The registration table will be located in the bookstore foyer of the Student Center. APO and Gamma Sigma, national service sorority, members will issue pledge cards and information to anyone wishing to donate blood.

The pledge cards are not necessary, but serve to give the APOs an approximate number of participants.

If this drive is successful, APO would continue to hold Spring drives in addition to the annual Fall drives, according to Scott Miller, blood club co-chairman.

Gallegos Discusses Bilingual Ed

By Elaine Krahl

Teachers are desperately needed in the field of bilingual education throughout the nation in a relatively new program that is gaining headway in the public schools. Dr. Ruben Gallegos, assistant superintendent of multi-cultural education for the Dallas Independent School District, said in a program Thursday, Feb. 13, in the Journalism Auditorium.

"Children come to our schools with their own language and culture and are told to forget it and start thinking in English. They can't forget a culture and language that is so important to them," Dr. Gallegos said during the program sponsored by the ET Bilingual Studies Committee. He added that because the United States is the fifth largest Spanish-speaking country in the world "the people might as well get used to the language."

Dr. Gallegos, an ET graduate, said there are presently 42 programs on bilingual education across the nation and that Spanish is not the only language concerned. He said Spanish is the second major language in Texas and needs emphasis.

Dr. Gallegos presented several reports on bilingual programs and said the general agreement is that teachers do not ask students to participate as much or not at all if the child does not know English well. He said this not only applies to Anglo teachers, and that Mexican-American teachers tend to do the same thing because they are not properly trained to handle such students.

Bilingual Program Gets Criticism

Bilingual programs in schools cannot be accomplished in a year, but some people seem to think so, Dr. Gallegos said. He said many persons are already criticizing the program before it has had a chance to prove itself. "We've given our present system of education 200 years to prove itself and people still won't admit it's a failure," he said.

The bilingual program in Texas operates under two acts, one national and one state bill, Dr. Gallegos said. An amendment to the Title VII Act of the 1965 Elementary and Secondary Education Act is the basis for programs in the United States.

Title VII emphasizes four goals for bilingual programs across the nation, Dr. Gallegos said. First, the program must be supervised to help get school systems started in the right direction, and there must be a change in curriculum to better suit the person who has a language besides English, he added.

Another goal of the Title VII Act is staff development enabling teachers to cope better with students. Finally, Dr. Gallegos said, the community must get involved in the program to make it work effectively.

Goal Is Changing Attitudes

Changing the attitudes of teachers is the most important goal of the program, according to Dr. Gallegos. Teachers must learn to involve their students in the classroom, he explained.

The main component of the Texas law for bilingual education is teacher training. Dr. Gallegos said there are 7,000 Mexican-American teachers in Texas, and many more bilingual teachers are needed to make a bilingual program work.

The goals of the law are to provide a better learning environment for the student who speaks another language other than English. Continued development of English as a second language to help the student function better is also included, he said.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

This letter concerns the basketball game Wednesday, Feb. 12, between the Hilltoppers, a white team, and the Magnificent 7, a black team. The head of intramurals was there and obviously "rooting" for the Hilltoppers. He had never attended a "7" game before. It was an extremely close game and about a minute before the game ended, one of the referees stopped the game and removed two points from the score of the "7" without asking for an official recount. When the game ended, the "7" were behind by two points. Upon severe protest from both "7" members and spectators, a recount was taken. For the "7" score, neither the points assigned each player nor the total score matched the shown score. These scores also did not match a privately kept score on the sidelines. When it was pointed out that the scorekeeper was wrong, a Hilltopper said that the scorekeeper had been under a lot of pressure. From whom he did not say. Also, as soon as the game ended, the head of intramurals was at the scorekeeper's desk backing him up. Obviously, the outcome of the game was predetermined by unnamed persons. We feel that a rematch should be scheduled, since the leader of "A" league was determined by this game, and that unbiased persons should be used as referees and scorekeepers.

Counseling Center Plans Interracial Living Project

The University Counseling Center is planning its sixth annual "Interracial Living Experience" April 4-13, according to Steve Favors and Alda Moore, program directors.

The experience, which has been a "highly successful" program in the past, consists of bringing approximately 60 volunteers of different races and ethnic backgrounds together in a residence hall for 10 days of "living, eating, and learning together," according to Favors.

During the 10 days, participants will explore their attitudes and the attitudes of others toward people of different races on various human relations issues.

The process involves group experiences, films, guest speakers, and human relations experiences, according to Ms. Moore.

The experience is open to all undergraduates, graduate students, and faculty members who want to participate.

Ms. Moore said that the deadline for filling out applications in the Counseling Center on the second floor of the Student Services Building is Thursday, March 13.

Security Reports Thefts, Collisions

Two thefts and two auto collisions have been reported to ET Security since Monday, Feb. 10. A variety of other offenses ranging from driving while intoxicated to theft by check were also reported.

At 6:17 p.m. Monday, Feb. 10, ET Security received a complaint that a fight had begun at the Field House during an Intramural game. Barney R. Iles, director of Intramurals, said that the fight began when a male student was removed from the basketball game for offensive conduct.

The student began fighting with an official at the scoring table who had removed him from another game earlier that week. The student has been barred from competition for the remainder of the spring semester.

Between 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 11, and 12:30 a.m. Wednesday, a 1972 Chevrolet Vega, owned by Joe Mark McDowell of Paris, was struck by a hit-and-run driver while parked in the lot at Turner Hall.

About 10 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 12, three textbooks, valued at $22.50, were stolen from a classroom in the Hall of Sciences. Another three textbooks, valued at $27, were taken at 9:20 a.m. Friday, Feb. 14 from a restroom in the Education South Building.

At 4:15 p.m. Friday, Feb. 14 a 1971 Volkswagen, driven by Bruce Peter Tibbetts of Commerce, lost its parking brakes and rolled from its parking place on University Drive into a tree about 50 feet away.

At 1:20 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 15, a non-student was arrested by ET Security and charged with driving while intoxicated. He was taken to the city jail and later transferred to Hunt County jail.

Scientist Discusses Dolphin Intelligence

Dolphins, with 60 million years of evolution behind them and a highly advanced brain, may have some things to tell the human race, according to Dr. Henry M. Truby, a world-famous scientist and professor at the University of Miami Florida. The dolphin — also called the porpoise — may live in a culture as advanced as our own, he added. Dr. Truby, who has spent decades of research on the dolphin, was a recent surprise guest at an ET linguistics class.

He said the mammal has been a friend of mankind through the ages, assisting lost mariners and also killing sharks. In more recent times, the dolphin has been trained to retrieve objects on the sea bottom as far as 1,000 feet down.

Dr. Truby noted that research and experimentation indicates the dolphin may indeed have hundreds of languages. During one attempt at teaching them to speak, he said scientists wound up talking in dolphin language instead.

Creating sounds through a "blow-hole," the mammals communicate through an intricate series of high-frequency whistles, clicks and guttural noise at an apparently much faster rate than that of human speech.

"Dolphins can vocalize in several different ways, and can imitate man," Dr. Truby said. "After mimicking the human voice for a while, they seem to become bored with our slowness and lapse into their own language."

These friendly creatures, growing to a length of nine feet and weighing up to 400 pounds, have a more sophisticated brain structure than man. The two lobes of the brain can act independently — if one lobe is injured, the other takes over all functions with no impairment.

Dr. Truby pointed out dolphins have three-dimensional sight like humans, but can also use each eye independently, a valuable tool for survival.

"All 55 species of dolphin are gentle, including the killer whale," he said, "and have never hurt a human."

Also on Saturday, a student was assaulted at 3:20 a.m. while in the 1700 block of West Neal Street. At 11:10 a.m., a male student was arrested in the Library for disorderly conduct. The suspect was taken to the Security Office and later released. Another student was arrested at 5:45 p.m. at the Security Office on a warrant for theft by check. He was turned over to the Hunt County Deputy Sheriff.

At 12:45 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 16, three non-students were arrested by ET Security on Walnut Street and taken to the city jail. The three were charged with public intoxication before the City Court and criminal mischief before the County Court.

Military Ball Slated For Friday, Feb. 28

A saber detail will guard the entrance to the AFROTC Military Ball at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28, in the American Ballroom of the Student Center, according to Cadet Lt. Bill Marlow, Holloman AFB, N.M. junior and deputy chief of special projects.

The theme is "The Year 2000" and one of 24 ET women in competition for the title of "Corps Sweetheart" will be announced as the winner, according to Marlow, who is in charge of the military ball.

Cadet Lt. David Knight, Sulphur Springs junior, is in charge of decorations and has reported that dry ice will be used for a smoke effect and that 12-foot weather balloons have been obtained to contain colored lights for the outer space theme. Electronic music and a light show are being provided by a local music shop.

A work session to build spacecraft and other decorations is set for Saturday, Feb. 22.

"We've sent out 193 invitations to various members of the faculty and local community as well as to 170 parents of our 84 AFROTC members and 27 members of Angel Flight," said Marlow. He added "We're expecting around 450-500 people to attend."

The ball is funded from the activity fee that each member pays during registration for AFROTC activities.

'Hamlet' Slated Feb. 20

The Shakespeare Film Festival, a Leisure Learning course, will show its first Shakespearean film, "Hamlet," Thursday, Feb. 20. The film will be shown at 3 and 7 p.m. in the Rio Grande Room. Stars of the movie are Sir Laurence Olivier, Peter Cushing and Jean Simmons. Admission will be free.

Students To Serve As Teachers Aides

Approximately 600 ET teacher education students will serve a total 20-30 hours each as teacher aides in public schools this semester, according to Dr. Keith Savage, assistant director, Educational Field Experience.

Savage said approximately 300 of the students began their assignments Monday, Feb. 17. The remainder will begin March 17. Savage added that applications for assignments to begin March 17 will be taken until Friday, Feb. 21.

Savage said that although teacher aide experience does not count toward teaching, it can be taken as a one hour credit. He added that teacher aide programs accomplish three things. The aides help teachers; and it gives the aides an opportunity to decide whether or not teaching is their field. And, he concluded, it helps those who do want to teach to perform better during student teaching.

According to Savage, a teacher aide will spend from 4-7 weeks completing 20-30 hours of classroom work. He added that those beginning on March 17, the week of spring-break, will complete their requirements during that week in their home town schools.

During the 1974-75 school year, approximately 1,150 students will have spent 34,500 hours working as teacher aides, according to Savage. He added that each student must have a tuberculin skin test before reporting for an assignment.

Dunn Speaks at BSU On Christian Philosophy

Dr. James Dunn, head of the Christian Life Commission for the Baptist General Convention of Texas, was scheduled to speak at the Baptist Student Union's Tuesday night meeting, "6:48."

Dr. Dunn, who received his Th.D. from the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, was to speak about "Christian Philosophy on a Playboy Campus."

"We're very lucky to get him here," said Debbie Smith who is on the staff at the BSU. According to Miss Smith, Dr. Dunn has been scheduled to come to Commerce several times, but has been unable to keep his engagement for health reasons.

Dr. Dunn, a native of Fort Worth, graduated magna cum laude from Texas Wesleyan College. He was pastor and administrator for several Texas churches and a professor of Bible at West Texas State University.

In 1966, he joined the Christian Life Commission. Since then, he has been involved in the movements for prison reform in Texas, civil rights laws and family code revisions. He also waged a war opposing the referendum which would have brought pari-mutuel betting to Texas.

Self-Paced Students In Math Get Room

A room within a classroom is being constructed in S-121 in the Hall of Sciences for the use of calculators and tutorial modules for freshman self-paced mathematics courses, according to Dr. Dale R. Bedgood, head of the Mathematics Department.

The room started as an idea in the spring of 1974, and will have grown to completion by the end of February, Dr. Bedgood said, and there will be enough room left over for the building of cabinets for storing elementary and secondary teaching materials.

Dr. Bedgood said that no separate room was available for the specific use of calculators and modules, so a large room was divided. The room was larger than any class needed, Dr. Bedgood added, and the main part of the room will still seat 55 students, enough room for a large class.

School Development Council's annual meeting here today and Thursday, Feb. 19-20, to be held in the Student Center, according to Dr. Lynn Turner, director, East Texas School Study Council.

Registration will begin at 4 p.m. today in the lobby of the Student Center. At 9 a.m. Thursday, Dr. Robert Howsam, dean, College of Education, University of Houston, will speak on "Performance-Based Training Programs and Evaluations."

At 2 p.m. Thursday, Dr. Della Todd, head, Special Education Department, is scheduled to speak on "Special Education Mainstreaming."

Motivational research is "figuring out what makes people tick and selling that to all kinds of organizations, commercial and political groups," according to Dr. Ernest Dichter, who spoke to a Forum Arts audience Monday, Feb. 17.

Dichter, who has developed and designed techniques to probe the hidden desires of consumers and has created a great deal of controversy with his methods and theories, spoke on "Motivational Behavior" to an audience of approximately 1,200, according to Sue Anglin, Forum Arts graduate assistant.

"What we are really doing is applying behavioral sciences, . . . to a whole long list of problems ranging literally from birth to death," the psychologist continued.

Dichter, the founder and president of the Institute for Motivational Research, Inc. in New York, also gave several examples of the kinds of surveys and questions the institute is currently working on for various clients: how to get women into girdles, does the American public need a new dog food, and how to get steel workers, coal workers, miners and other workers to become more productive.

He explained that the first step in the methodology of studying products is to first understand the public's attitude toward the product and where it comes from.

Dichter, who received his Ph.D. in psychology from the University of Vienna, used as example the association of wealth with carpet thickness. He said that this belief that the thicker the carpet, the wealthier the owner, dates back to cave days when the thickness of leaves or straw on the cave floor indicated one's wealth.

The second step in studying a product according to Dichter, who is a member of the American Psychological Association, is to study the changes and developments in societies and their attitudes.

As an example, he said that Americans are becoming more hedonistic and that puritanism is losing prominence. This is evidenced by the rejection of old American values by the young, according to Dr. Dichter.

Finally, the third step is to find a method of discovering these attitudes and changes, he said. "Depth interviewing" or lengthy, rambling conversations, which he is credited with inventing, is one method that he uses.

In depth interviewing, the interviewer does not tell the respondent what he is interested in finding out, but rather lets him talk "frequently and continuously" in order to discover his true attitudes and feelings, Dr. Dichter explained.

He added, however, that first one must set up a hypothesis and then formulate his questions around this in order to prove or disprove his theory.

Dichter uses these methods to gather information for large corporations such as General Motors, General Foods, American Airlines, and Goodyear, who then apply these discoveries in their advertising campaigns to help improve sales.

The Austrian-born psychologist also expressed some observations on the future and the changes that will take place.

"I see as a solution to our present crisis creative energy. There is no industry, there is no community, there is no country that cannot use a new kind of thinking. Our school system needs to be reformed, our hospital system needs to be reformed, . . . our whole distribution system is completely outdated," he said.

With the rapid changes that are taking place in industry and throughout society, "What we need is to accept a whole new philosophy of life. We have to conquer technology," he added.

Biofeedback Center Desired

By Jeanie Shanahan

After using a borrowed biofeedback instrument and being awarded a faculty research grant, ET's student personnel and guidance department and Counseling Center have gained a start toward their hope of establishing a biofeedback center for all students to use.

Biofeedback training enables a person to control his internal functions such as temperature, blood pressure, and heart rate, with the help of a feedback machine to gain better health or a relaxed state of mind, according to doctoral student Jen Colvin. Miss Colvin is involved in biofeedback research at ET and plans to include her research as part of her dissertation.

The counseling center had been using a brain wave trainer, one type of biofeedback instrument, borrowed from a graduate student in mid-November on a temporary trial basis. According to Dr. William Troth, student personnel and guidance faculty, he and Dr. Robert Gold, student personnel and guidance faculty, became interested in biofeedback training when they attended a biofeedback session in Manhattan, Kan., last October.

So far, the brain wave trainer has helped people on campus improve their dealing with migraine headaches and according to Dr. Troth, one woman ridded herself of a headache while hooked to the machine.

Additional Machines More Expensive

Two other types of biofeedback machines are the temperature trainer and muscle-tension trainer. According to Dr. Troth, about $5,000 is necessary to buy a sufficient quantity of each of the three machines to establish an adequate biofeedback center, while $8,000 to $10,000 would allow for "more sophisticated" equipment with which they would be able to accomplish more research. The difference between an adequate center and a more elaborate one is that a less expensive center would be reliable while a more expensive one would be sensitive for research.

After sending proposals for money to the university the faculty research fund, and the Hogg Foundation of the University of Texas of Austin, Dr. Gold was awarded a $1,000 faculty research grant on Feb. 15. They hope to receive more money for biofeedback training, according to Dr. Troth. "Hopefully, next fall we will be able to come off the ground with a program for the students," he said.

Students Could Use Computer

Though the borrowed machine they were using currently was not available to students in general, Dr. Troth said that a biofeedback center could be set up similar to the Counseling Center so that any interested student could use the center free. Perhaps courses such as Leisure Learning could be arranged in connection with the center, he said.

Not many universities have conducted research in biofeedback training, and the research that she will do has not been done before, Miss Colvin said. Terming her research a "fishing expedition," she said she "does not know what we are going to come up with." Miss Colvin's research will be done in the name of the university and she hopes to publish several articles about her research.

Machines Control Internal Behavior

Biofeedback training brings different sciences such as biology, psychology, medicine, and counseling, together. In the past, it was thought that man could not control his internal processes, but now it is known that he can control functions such as blood pressure, temperature, heart-beat, blood flow, and other internal behavior, Miss Colvin said.

Biofeedback machines help a person control his internal involuntary processes by indicating to the person what state they are in. When a person sees how his internal processes react when he modifies his reactions while he is attached to the machine, he learns how to behave when he is away from the machine to correct his internal functions, Miss Colvin said.

An example of how biofeedback works, a temperature trainer is used to help a person to control migraine headaches. To improve a migraine headache, blood flow must return to the head by drawing it back from the extremities, thus lowering blood temperature. The temperature trainer sends signals to the person attached to the machine indicating what he did to reduce his temperature, he will be able to do the same when other headaches occur, according to Dr. Troth.

Biofeedback Aids in Relaxation

Biofeedback is also useful in controlling brain waves, which is helpful in counseling because it helps people to relax, Miss Colvin said. One of the different levels of awareness, alpha, is a peaceful, alert, very relaxed state which yogas reach, and can be reached with the help of the brain wave trainer. When the machine's electrodes are attached to the head, different tones indicate how close the person is to the alpha state. Later, he will be able to attain the alpha state by remembering how it felt, Miss Colvin said.

Biofeedback research was begun in Europe earlier, but it has only recently spread to the United States, Miss Colvin said. She became interested in biofeedback because the idea that man can be in control of his internal behavior intrigues her, Miss Colvin said. She decided about six months ago to do her research in biofeedback.

ET Office Conducts Tours of Campus

More than 800 prospective ET students have been taken on tours of the ET campus by staff members of the Testing and Orientation Office, according to Debbie Damron, office secretary.

The tour service includes a tour of the campus, a visit with a professor in the student's major field, and lunch in the cafeteria. Visits are also made to any other office which the student is interested in, Miss Damron said.

Suites in Hubbell and Smith Halls can be reserved in advance for overnight guests at no charge.

Miss Damron said that the main purpose behind the tours is for the student to gain a more "personalized" view of ET. Tours are conducted 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9-noon on Friday and Saturday.

Miss Damron said that the tours provide information about ET's history, departments, activities, and organizations. Miss Damron said that it was also a good opportunity for faculty members to invite interested individuals to the campus.

Testing and Orientation has encountered a problem in getting enough tour conductors, she related. Sororities, fraternities and other organizations are being asked for help, Miss Damron added.

Tarrant Rakes in Honors

By Rod Paasch

O'Neal Tarrant is a short man playing a giant's game, but he doesn't let his lack of height get him down.

"I never think about it," Tarrant said after a basketball practice session, "until someone says something or I read about it in the paper."

Tarrant, 5-10 guard on the ET basketball team, from Brooklyn, N.Y., carries more than just 175 pounds with him every time he takes to the hardwood. Although he's the shortest player on the team, the spunky junior jumping jack holds tall, tall cage credentials.

Tarrant is ET's top scorer with 23.2 points per game. He is the run-away leader in assists, the top free throw man (.811), and the man who seems to break the ice by scoring when no one else can.

He has been the Lone Star Conference's "Player of the Week" twice this season and holds six ET scoring records, including most points in a season, most points in a career and most consecutive free throws scored.

In 1973 Tarrant was selected the LSC "Freshman of the Year" and received honorable mention NAIA All-America honors.

The summer after his freshman season he was picked to play with the NAIA All-Stars in Israel and was a part-time starter. The team went undefeated.

After his sophomore season, in which ET won the LSC title, Tarrant garnered overwhelming honors. He was the LSC "Most Valuable Player," and became an honorable mention AP wire service All-America pick, a second team NAIA All-America selection, and a Universal

Tarrant

Sports All-America player. That summer the New Yorker again made the NAIA All-Star squad and traveled to Bogata, Columbia, to participate in the Cup of Nations Basketball Tournament. A former high school teammate, Loyd Free of Guilford College, N.C., was also on the team. Tarrant scored 80 points in six games and the All-Stars lost only to Russia, 101-88.

At Canarsie High School, New York, Tarrant and his teammates went 24-0 to win the coveted City Championship his senior year, and the Brooklyn dynamo reaped honor after honor.

"The tallest man on the team was only 6-3," Tarrant said.

Despite all of his poise and efficiency on the court during a game, Tarrant says he is mainly a self-taught player.

"I taught myself how to play basketball. Every day, 365 days a year, whether it was raining or snowing, I was at the park shooting basketballs."

He generally went alone. "You don't need anyone else to shoot basketballs; you can practice alone," he added.

He began playing in high school as a sophomore, but found he also liked football.

"I went for tryouts and made the football team," he recollected, "but the coach told me I had to make a decision, football or basketball. You stick with what you're best at, so I'm in basketball."

Hugo Cabrera, a junior center-forward on the ET team and Tarrant's roommate for three years, had a lot to do with Tarrant's coming to ET. The two met in a game after the high school season and, both being recruited by Lion coach Jim Gudger, decided to attend ET together.

Cabrera and Tarrant are both majoring in physical education, minoring in sociology and are three year starters for ET.

"We used to have all our classes together," Tarrant said, referring to his freshman year. He added that the two best buddies "still take the same courses and have a couple of classes together."

After the 1971-72 season, ET had two starting positions open, guard and forward. The situation appealed to high schoolers Tarrant and Cabrera, and the 1972-73 season found them starting for the Lions—Tarrant at guard and Cabrera at forward.

ET had more merit to offer than just a quick shot at glory.

"Coach Gudger promised me an education," Tarrant noted, and then declared that it has always been "School first, basketball second."

With busy schedules made busier by practices (seven days a week), games and road trips, the athletes sometimes have to miss classes.

"We have to make up the work we miss," Tarrant said. "They don't give us anything, we have to work for our grades. I take my books on every road trip... and study in the hotel before the game."

With one year of college eligibility left, he is eyeing a pro career. If that doesn't work out, Tarrant has other plans.

Tarrant is more than just a basketball player. He is a young man who wants to keep younger men "straight." He worked with underprivileged kids part of last summer.

"I want to help them and keep 'em off the streets, keep 'em off drugs," he said.

Athletics can play a strong role keeping a youngster "out of trouble" and Tarrant takes it seriously.

"If you help one kid, he'll go on and help some more. It carries on."

Sort of like O'Neal Tarrant's basketball talents, they just carry on and on.

Tickets Being Sold For LSC Tourney

Summer Jobs Still Available For Students

By Debbie West

Summer and vacation jobs for college students are still available despite rising inflation, depressed business conditions and the gasoline shortage.

Information from the ET Placement Office files, news releases, book publishers and magazines report that jobs in resort areas, camps and hotels are generally plentiful as well as jobs for those with good office skills.

Students who are persistent and follow up leads may be able to find summer work, but they should start looking now. There are a variety of sources students can use as an aid in finding summer job information.

The ET Placement Office keeps a file of summer job opportunities available in summer resort areas and camps. These positions, including Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and the YMCA, offer placement to students throughout the country who have experience and skills in everything ranging from program directors to a black powder rifle specialist.

Information in the placement office indicates that these outdoor and summer camp jobs are obtained on a first-come first-serve basis and applicants are selected solely on the basis of ability.

Information and applications for Yellow Stone Park Service, Glacier Park, Boy Scouts of America and others with complete lists of job opportunities are available in the placement office or by contacting the special camp's local or regional office.

Temporary job agencies such as Manpower, Kelly Girl Services and Western Girl offer another source for students seeking summer or vacation jobs. Employees are not usually charged a fee and these agencies, whether local or national, can place students with office skills as well as those seeking jobs in industry, marketing or medical technology.

The federal government offers some temporary employment. Information and opportunities available are listed in a pamphlet titled "Summer Jobs in Federal Agencies" which can be obtained from any Civil Service Commission Office.

The Texas Employment Commission and most state employment services offer a variety of jobs and can be helpful in obtaining information concerning jobs in state parks.

Students interested in working abroad can obtain information through travel agencies and firms that specialize in employment overseas. There are also several books published that give details concerning work regulations for each country and the types of jobs available abroad.

"The Directory of Overseas Summer Jobs," 216 Ludlow Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio, 45220, $5.95, lists sources of paid and volunteer jobs. "The Whole World Handbook," available in book stores, does not list many commercial job sources, but does list jobs which offer accommodations and pocket money.

"The Collegiate Summer Employment Guide," 1081 Westwood Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca. 90024, $5, reviews summer jobs available in Europe plus a wide variety of opportunities in the United States.
