He Regretted It A Short Story

By Louis Green

Deeply engrossed in his work, he didn't notice the door opening. He looked up and saw a young man in a dark suit and tie standing in the doorway. The young man looked at him for a moment and then spoke.

"Excuse me," he said, "but I'm looking for Mr. Green. He lives here, doesn't he?"

"Yes," said the man, "but he's not at home. He's out on business."

"I'm sorry," said the young man, "but I must see him. He's very important."

"I'm afraid I can't help you," said the man, "but I'll try to find out when he'll be home."

"Thank you very much," said the young man, "I'll wait here for a moment."

The man looked at him for a moment and then went back into the house. The young man sat down on the sofa and waited. He looked at his watch and saw that it was ten o'clock. He looked at the door and saw that it was closed. He looked at his watch again and saw that it was ten o'clock. He looked at the door again and saw that it was closed. Training School Happenings

By MARY WILEY SMITH
The members of the English and Spanish clubs at the training school are busy preparing for the coming year. The English club is preparing a play and the Spanish club is preparing a play in Spanish.

There is a certain French air about the school here. The French club is preparing a play and the Spanish club is preparing a play in Spanish.

A great many letters were received from the students at the training school. The letters were very interesting and showed that the students were enjoying their stay at the school.
