NE STANU FOR:

1. The building up of a school spirit among students of East Texas that will mean not only the whole-hearied court of the athletic team. New attentions upon by several parameters of the school of t well. A higher standard of lyecum excellence even to the extent of fewer programs, if necessary, 3. A new woman's building, a swimming pool, an out-door amphilibeater, a single building to house all indus-trial work, a new building to replace the old Main Building. 4. A paved driveway in front of the Library Building and around the circle.

Out Of The Smoke

All right, boys, you who lost, let's see you walk right up with a big smile on your face and congrat-ulate the one who beat you soundly in the elec-tion. You may have called him a dirty dog, and he may have called you a low down rat in the heat of the campaign but it is all over now. Let's see who can be the best sports.

One of the greatest values of college life is the multitude of friends gained. Do not let this little multitude of friends gained. Do not let this little election get your goat, but keep those friends who are going to be with you through life. Unfortuna-tablely there was muld slinging in this campaign, but as usual it was largely from those who merely wanted to suspect evil intent of somebody. We are sure that all the candidates genninely regret some of the things that their supporters said.

Thursday, all the winning candidates will be honored by an installation ceremony in chapel, and, doubtless, most of the student body will be there to applicud its new officers. May the new officers remember that they represent the whole officers remember that they represent the whole student body and conduct the student functions in all fairness to all groups. May the student body also remember that this is the will of the majority and cooperate to the fullest with the new officers of the association in the coming year.

President Dictate War

On the eve of our entry into the World War, William Jennings Bryan resigned his post as see retary of state because he felt that government's policy did not jibe with its professions of neutral-ity. His office was taken over by Robert Lansing. 11y. In affice was taken over by Robert Lansing, whose meinories, recently published, show that his mind was definitely made up on the matter. In the weantime, Woodrow Wilson had not modified his apparent stand of neutrality.

The first impulse, of course, is to blaine Lausing for laking a decidedly methical stand largainst his seem to indicate that Wilson was view as seem to indicate that Wilson was view as seen to indicate that Wilson was view as the secretary's intentions. Calling a space as pade, Wilson definitely used Lansing as a bride to change the attitude of the United States in fa-vor of the Allies.

The trick of using a subordinate in such a fash The Freek or using a subordinate in such a fash-ion is an old one. The role of Rex Togwell in the New Deal was of such a character; President Roosevelt seems to have escaped by using him as a target. In strictly internal affairs this strategy without its virtues, not one declaration of volves a stand which, when taken, cannot be rmanded by slowly forming public opinion.

omtermanded by slowly forming public opinion. The issue resolves itself to this: in foreign adins the chief executive still bolds the keyr prior o s war criss it is his action which will offunded so releve us a free hand. Public opinion must set, and be villigant to a point isordering on has-lity, that its chief executive act with candor. In its way alone can democratic choice be significant, instead of a pronagrada-whipped "ye" to a disc decision. — (From the Montana Exponent, fontata State College; Distributed by College fores Service).

Girls at the University of Kentucky do not prefer the tall, dark and handsome type of man. They like some one on the order of Jimmy Durante or Denner, on the theory that "There is nothing in all the world like a good horse laugh, and a riddiculous lover would at least keep a girl amused."
