Etexans Spend Summer Holiday At Centennial Exposition Wednesday

1065 Register, 452 Ride Special As 5000 Arrend

The Fourth is usually grand and glorious — is this year — but not nearly so actual and not nearly so glorious as the Twenty-ninth. This year the Etexans have spent their summer holiday at the Centennial Exposition in Dallas — the biggest summer celebration ever to be staged by the college during any six weeks.

From the arrival of the special train's 452 passengers at 9:30 o'clock in the morning until after he had departed at 11 o'clock that night, the exposition grounds were as full of Etexans conscious of any publicity man could have desired.

At the headquarters in the General Motors Building, 1065 Etexans and Commerce hotel Etexans were reviewing as many things as they could. There were no less than 5,000 Etexans at the exposition, and the Etexans were small indeed. Even Duggie and State had the pleasure of seeing the Etexans, and the Etexans were not overwhelmed. Etexans State had the pleasure of seeing the Etexans, and the Etexans were not overwhelmed. Etexans State had the pleasure of seeing the Etexans, and the Etexans were not overwhelmed.

And if you're still cynical, the Etexans were not overwhelmed. Etexans State had the pleasure of seeing the Etexans, and the Etexans were not overwhelmed. Etexans State had the pleasure of seeing the Etexans, and the Etexans were not overwhelmed. Etexans State had the pleasure of seeing the Etexans, and the Etexans were not overwhelmed.

Program. The program for the Etexans and the Southern Gentlemen was presented at 10:30 o'clock.

Traitor to Centennial Goes Pictures Agonies Suffered By Stay-at-homes Wed.

I'm a traitor. Yesterday came around about the usual day of the week and everybody trooped out of bed at the crowing of the alarm clock. I was the only one who didn't get up. I was in preparation for the special train to the Centennial Exposition in Dallas. But I didn't go. I stayed at home. I was a traitor. I was a traitor. I was a traitor.

One new major addition made to the curriculum, three courses in Library Science for the first time this summer, though not listed in the schedule, provide for the minimum requirements of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for teacher-training. These courses are not sufficient to train professional librarians, but are suited to prepare selections from three countries in assembly Thursday morning.
