a selatable question. To us, however, it seems that the instruction and not the deans' offices should be the one to judge in individual cases whether two or eight or ten absence are excessive. After all, in some cases the pres-ent allowable three might be too many, but under the scale pas in now stands, no one is allowed to pass upon this possibility. It is one rishers belief that if the question of who-had taken too many cuts in what, left entirely to the dis-cretion of the individual instructors, who are in daily contact with their classes, and are in a better position to contact with their classes, and are in a better position: for know individual abilities than the remote deams offices, a better general class attendance than now exists would insuitable search. Indeer the present 'lax system, it is the deams offices—under the suggested revision there would be no set thing, as an "expected revision there would be no set thing, as an "expected" absence. In all fairness to the general stateent body, allowing excues-for absence bening the discontinual. After all, the student by learned some-from a class recritation. Its dish't attend than one who star alsest simply, for reasons of his own, and since the yardstels, in measuring individual grades for sollege courses is, or at least should is, low well the individual masters the subject matter, we see no reason why any discrimination should be made in determining a studied's strate because of the bestimacy or lilegatimacy of his absence. In elementary or high schools, where to in extent such disciplinary negatives are more essary—perhaps yes, but in college, where re-fast becoming men and women and must be

We build walls of resistances, standards we call then, which not only encourages dishumesty but actually rewards it, thereby supplying a most fertile environment for the development of this negative attitude of getting something for nothing." Made no one knows how to outlaw this practice completely, but a good field for study is provided by it.

Again Mr. Eliiot says: "There are teachers who con-tinue to build walls of resistance, during their jupils to mount them. It is not a rare thing to hear teachers local of their high rate of failures, despite the face that such partitle, is an obvious and stupid confession of their own failures.
