Wrangling With Willie

Monday morning, dinner time and twelve hundred miles from home. No regrets in the least. In fact, we are having the time of our lives. We staggered (not tired) into this town last night about 3 a. m. After starting about a bit we humbly inquired of a policeman where the headquarters were. Imagine our amazement to be personally escorted by a patrol car to a huge twelve story building and introduced to the clerk. The clerk immediately jumped up, two hell-hounds grabbed our luggage and were taken up to one of the most luxuriously furnished rooms I have ever seen. The building, which was the Minors Athletic Club, looked a little like paradise to us. Eight hours sleep helped a lot.

Student Opinion

From many and various sections of the campus can be heard mumbled and growls to the tune of "we ain't fair," "something ought to be done," "going to demand-reform," and even "we'll do it ourselves." Why all this growling because of assistants of the college have had salaries raised? Some of these assistants who have existed off the school for a period of time, long enough to forget how hard they were "first got the job, all they would have taken their present job at about any salary. The students have forgotten that it is a privilege to be accepted as a student assistant. They do not see that those who do the most complaining are the hardest jobs, and the smallest salaries. There exists a delicate balance of cooperation from the student employed students, who have failed to learn during the college career that trained and experienced officials can manage the college business more efficiently than a mere college student group of students think they can. The faculty of this college, a favored substantial class started every summer, who should a student assistant think that his salary should not be cut accordingly. Those student employees would just stop and teach, really they are not doing anything but there are five other students who are really to step into their places as quickly as they step out and can do the work just as efficiently, and with a whole lot less fuss.
