DRESS AS YOU PLEASE
When, except during these college years, does society ever think of dress? ...

Today, even precisely now, during the dull gray days of January, let there be color, dash, individuality—anything bizarre, if necessary—so to mix up out of mid-winter doldrums, to make the best of the few moments in life in which we can act as we please, and dress quite as we please.
Oh, with the purple skirt, the plaid scarf, the scarlet shoes, the violet necktie! We're not grown-ups; we're made specialties of ourselves trying to act like grown-ups.

There are cranks to do and things to do and a couple of quacks ... Dropping in for tea.

If anyone calls Perhaps I'll go To dance or to eat Or to a show.

There are books I'm planning to read tonight, And several others I ought to write.

And all the time I'll be thinking of you; I shall recover—I always do.
