THE EAST TEXAN

Motto: "Careless Industry, Fearless Investigation, Unfettered Thought."

VOL. III.

COMMERCE, TEXAS, THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1918.

NO. 17.

In a game replete with thrills in the form of hard hits and wonderful feinting the Faculty was defeated on the College park diamond Saturday afternoon to the tune of 3 to 2.

The Faculty, going in as they did with out a work out, surprised the loyal fans by their speed and knowledge of the game. Their hitting and base running factored through out and but for the fact they became over confident, and showed up a bit, would have played the students to a standstill. Among their line up will be found many old leaguers and College stars of famous teams over the country. This accounts for the very fast work up early in the season.

The evident team, too, played in mid season form, and but for the fact that they were on their toes at all times doubtless would now be getting up individual slabs. Their feinting was alright, and the probability to run up a total score was lessened only by the fast feinting and wonderful throwing of the faculty team.

A noticeable feature of the game was the loyal support of the faculty school. Practically every member of the Faculty and student body was out rooting for their favorite like regular fans.

The box score follows:

Dr. Musselman Visits College.

Dr. H. T. Musselman of Dallas, editor of the Texas School Journal, was a visitor to the College for two or three days last week. Dr. Musselman is a Southern man who is well known throughout a number of States as a foremost educator. He is a native of Virginia, but has lived in Texas for a number of years and is very well acquainted with her educational affairs. He delivered an excellent address in chapel during his visit on "The Public School and the Future of Democracy."

The Clifford Devereux Company.

The Clifford Devereux Company who are shortly to appear at playing the best examples of the world's greatest dramatic authors have established a reputation as the foremost exponent of reality and only authentic drama and proving that the highest degree of popular enjoyment and educational value is possible at one time.

Their repertoire this season includes "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" of present-day conveniences by the father of modern drama, the immortal Hugo.

"The Romanens" by Rostand, the most distinguished example of fantastic and romantic French comedy. "Docteur Mystere" Moliere, the foremost French comedy author, which is without a rival for creating gay, irresponsible laughter.

The play is preceded by "The Bishop's Confession," an exciting play, adapted from Les Miserables, the celebrated masterpiece of Victor Hugo.

The highest recognition has been accorded the Clifford Devereux Company for their unique artistic work as is evidenced by their frequent engagements at Columbia University, University of Georgia, University of West Virginia, University of Virginia, University of Tennessee, University of Texas, Miami University and the majority of the leading colleges in the country, including Vassar, Penn State College, etc.

All the members of the company are especially selected for their experience and ability to give adequate interpretation to the exacting characterizations and the interest and laughter which invariably greets their efforts is a tribute to the increasing popularity of this organization which is now enjoying its sixth consecutive season.

Give Books to Soldiers and Sailors.

Look over your shelves and pick out the books you are going to send to the men in khaki.

Select the books you enjoyed, but will never read again.

Choose some you would like to keep. Others will like them, too.

Men like Adventure, Western Stories, Detective Stories, Biography, Travel, History, and Poetry of all kinds.

War Books, military manuals and up-to-date technical books are in great demand.

Wrap them up and label the package "Library War Service, American Library Association."

Send the package to the Public Library or telephone and they will be called for.

The Last Laugh

A red-headed man met a bald-headed man on the street one day. Said the red-headed man: "I see you didn't seem to have much hair where you came from."
 "Huh!" retorted the bald-headed one. "There was plenty of hair but it was all red and I wouldn't have it."

Books Needed by Our Soldiers And Sailors.

The Library War Service of the American Library Association is extending its work already established in thirty-four camps by sending books to the men "over there." With several hundred thousand books in its free circulating camp libraries and branches, it needs many thousands more to meet the demands being made upon it. Its fund, generously given by the public last autumn, is being used to purchase books which will not come to it through gifts, and for purchasing great quantities of books in England for our troops in France, to have transportation across the ocean.

During the week of March 13, great consignments of books from private collections will supply the books needed to extend the humanizing work of the Library War Service, to the constantly increasing number of men under arms; to furnish books and magazines to the sailors on naval vessels at home and in foreign waters; and to place books on transports for the men going abroad.

Generous owners of private collections of books are asked to take such of their volumes as they would like to give for the use of soldiers and sailors to the Public Library, marked "Library War Service." They will be taken care of by trained library workers sent to work at once upon camp library shelves.

D. K. E. Gets Helmet

The first German war helmet to be captured in France and sent to the University of Texas arrived Monday addressed to the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, in care of McFord Melshire.

The trophy was sent the long distance from "over there" by Lieut. J. Henry Daulton, formerly a University student and a member of the D. K. E. Fraternity. Lieut. Daulton attended the first training camp at Leon Springs was transferred to Fort Monro, Va., where he received his commission in July. At present he is attending the Army Trench Mortar School of the American Expeditionary Forces in France.

The helmet is an unusually large one, several sizes too large for an ordinary head. It is made of steel and weighs several pounds. It was evidently constructed to withstand anything in the way of shrapnel, and would probably turn even a rifle bullet, unless the bullet was directed straight against it.

Red Cross Work

Interminable folds of gauze
 For those whom we shall never see—
 Remember when your fingers pass
 That every drop of blood to stain
 This whiteness falls for you and me,
 Part of the price that keeps us free
 To serve our own, that keeps us clean.

From shame that other women know,
 O saviors we have never seen,
 Forgive us that we are so slow!
 God—if that blood should cry in vain
 And we have left our moment gone
 —Annela Josephine Burr.

Red Cross News.

Many of the students have realized at last, that it is their duty to do all they can in the way of patriotic service. The interest is increasing, and much more work is being done now than previously.

The present slogan, "Knit! The Red Cross is well supplied with knitting yarn. All who can knit should come and work on the sweaters and other articles that are being made. There are several ladies in charge of the rooms, who will be glad to show you how to knit."

When Mr. Frasier, of the Army the Red Cross presented him with a sweater knitted by the teachers and the students of this college. He expressed his appreciation in such a way that made the Red Cross patriots want to knit all the more to benefit our soldiers. Many of E. T. S. N. C. boys are likely to enlist for service at any time. Will you help knit articles of clothing for them?

The soldiers really need sweaters, socks, etc. Recently a whole regiment was about to be prevented from going over sea, because it did not have the required pairs of socks. The Red Cross came to the rescue, supplied the socks, and the regiment was allowed to proceed.

Let us be ready for any emergency. Come to the Red Cross room. We must work.

El. Huachuca, Arizona.
March 5, 1918.
To The East Texan,
Commerce, Texas.

Dear Friends:—
A few days ago I was with you but being seized by a sudden desire to do something unusually bold and daring, I boarded the train and came to the end of the road which is Ft. Huachuca, Arizona, in this case. They say this an ideal haunt for one who is able to deal with things in a business manner because there is no room for their expansion. One of the soldiers who came here ten years ago told me, "When I came here we had nothing but the barracks, the mess hall and the stable. Indeed, there were the mountains and the prairie." So, I naturally drew the conclusion that the mountains and the prairie were here even before that time.
My quarters is an adobe building. I was woked at first, because it had so many cracks in it, but I have learned since then, that it is a necessary stage in the life of an adobe building, because, later, to make a "bust." This case, has, four-story rooms, two porches and two halls, and has all the modern conveniences, including hot and cold water connections. On account of this fact, I can manage to keep my family in hot water whenever I wish but also have every excuse for keeping a cool head during any emergency. But I try to live in Arizona and not in the house, even though I have so many conveniences.
A few days ago after my sudden stop here after a long way rolling (though I was rolling up hill) my children and I went out mountain climbing. The children wanted to run up the hills and down into the valleys; but I, wishing to conserve all my energy, made a few observations about mountain climbing, among which were the following:
Climb one mountain at a time, the view from one mountain in some directions often obstructed by other mountains; the appearance of any given place varies according to the changing view-point from the mountains. Of course, you may already know this but perhaps you had never thought of it before.
As I came down the mountain I observed that it was necessary to guard against descending too fast. About half way down I heard a sound and imagined I heard Miss Murrie say, "Give me 10." Trying to interpret the succession of tones, I thought surely I heard Mrs. Wilkerson say, "La la la." Then suddenly I realized that I was hearing the Ft. Huachuca band for my first time. I sat down to listen and imagining I was hearing the College orchestra, I dreamed dreams and saw visions and the principal characters of these were the teachers of the dear young E. T. S. N. C. and the members of the renowned fourth year class—the Seniors—who have excelled all preceding fourth year students of the E. T. S. N. C. both in faith and in words.
I seemed to see my teachers in a solemn council of war. Prof. McCollum, with great gravity and vehemence, expressed himself thus: "This was not only just but it is also necessary." Then Prof. Fling in his curtly manner said: "This revolution will create new conditions which will revolutionize education." Prof. Wray very decisively and patriotically declared, "the part which the United States must play in this upheaval of principles and institutions must be performed in the spirit of service." Miss Terrill quietly and sincerely re-

"We ought to learn Spanish in order to affiliate more closely with South American and Mexican neighbors we should learn French to be able to wipe the cause of our French misdeeds off completely, we must understand German to do away with the German intrigues, by all means we must know Latin to have a foundation for those other languages."

Miss Johnson, in her own superior manner, in a study of emulation, expressed this desire, "I would protect the young woman under my care from all degrading influences and guide them into paths of righteousness in order that they may more efficiently fill the places left vacant while their brothers and sweethearts are in the war." Miss Dilworth, with eloquence in her eyes, courage in her heart and sternness in her voice, arose and said, "I am ready to forward, march, who will go with me!" Then Prof. Binning said, "You will hear the sentiment of this institution. Now must come the call for active service after you have finished your school work, if possible, because this is a conflict of brains rather than of muscles." Then forward that brave and true hearted fourth year class and each, in turn, offered her services. Miss Estes would be the American Joan of Arc. Miss Moulton would cheer the flagging spirits of the soldiers when in the face of the fire by rescuing the flag and waving the banner, "Let us finish what we have begun." Miss Wilkinson would say to the wounded, "I will comfort thee." Miss Stokoe would say to the dying, "Lo, I will be with thee to the end." The student body now divided itself into four sections and each section put itself under the command of one of these great leaders. Prof. Binning then asked Miss Murrie to lead "The Star Spangled Banner," which she did while knitting a helmet for one of the Samicks.

But now, I woke from my dream and realized that I heard the sound for "Retreat." Every soldier saluted the flag and involuntarily I did, too. How I love the flag. It gives a thrill that must be divine to feel that millions of minds have but a single thought; millions of hearts beat as one.

After my husband's absence my next experience was horseback riding but I shall get some technique for this wonderful performance at a later writing.

Very sincerely yours,

Learning to Knit.

My good wife is learning to knit, to knit, knit, knit, knit, knit, knit. It's solemn to sit near by. And look, as she frets in a panicky fit.

At the bottom of her loving eye, Knit, knit, liberty split.

Bound and determined to finish her bit, Casting and purling, disdainful to quit,

My good wife is learning to knit, My good wife is learning to knit, to knit,

Our home's in an awful mess; I've had nothing to eat since the knitting crane bit.

And I won't have either, I guess. Nothing to eat, till she comes out of it—

Was ever a fellow so pesky hard hit,
My good wife is learning to knit. —The Industrialist.

any—a box of your gauzes has just been opened in our warehouse, which is now growing most alarmingly empty. A few weeks ago thousands of cases were piled up nearly to the ceiling waiting to be sent to our hospitals and to the battlefields. Now most of these cases have gone out on their mission of mercy and the orders for supplies of all kinds come larger and oftener than ever.

"We count on you to enable us to keep pace with the needs of the soldiers. Thanking you for your help, I am cordially yours,

GERHARDE AUSTIN,

Chief of Service.
Mrs. J. B. Oldham, who has just been elected chairman of the Highland Park Auxiliary, announced that that organization is starting a big campaign for more workers. She said that 50 to 100 women make supplies at the auxiliary's workshop at the Dallas County Club at each meeting but that many additional workers are needed. She said the appeal, from France, stating that there is a most alarming shortage of Red Cross supplies at a time when the greatest conflict of the war is expected, daily, should arouse every loyal woman to a realization of the fact that her services are needed badly in the workshops of the Red Cross.

Mrs. Murrell L. Barker has been appointed as chief recruiting officer for the campaign, which will be conducted systematically and thoroughly. It will continue indefinitely. The 200 women who have pledged to do Red Cross work with the auxiliary will be divided into committees and a district will be assigned to each committee. The committee women will telephone or call personally upon each woman residing in their respective districts. An effort will be made to impress upon the women the fact that Uncle Sam can not win the war without them and that the wounded soldiers probably would have to go without the proper medical relief and some of them might die if the women of Dallas did not do their share of the Red Cross work at home.

"We frequently have work the men do just as well as or better than the women," Mrs. Oldham said. "We will continue to have men's nights at intervals and we will make a special effort to increase the attendance of men."

"We want to increase our output greatly and the only way that can be done is to procure more workers."

Try Again.

"Do you love your neighbor?"
"I try, but she'll not let me."—

The Loft Answer.

Professor Copeland of Harvard, as the story goes, reproved his students for coming late to class.

"This is a class in English composition," he remarked with sarcasm "not an afternoon tea."

At the next meeting one girl was twenty minutes late. Professor Copeland waited until she had taken her seat. Then he remarked bitinglly:

"How will you have your tea, Miss Brown?"
"Without the lemon, please," Miss Brown answered quite gently.—
