COMMERCE, TEXAS, THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1918.

NO. 19.

EAST TEXAS STATE NORMAL COLLEGE
Announcement of
SUMMER SCHOOL AND SUMMER NORMAL INSTITUTE
Commerce, Texas, 1918.

GENERAL INFORMATION
SUMMER SCHOOL:
Opens June 11, 1918.
Closes August 17, 1918.
SUMMER NORMAL INSTITUTE:
Opens June 11, 1918.
Closes August 22, 1918.

WORK OF THE SUMMER SCHOOL.
The summer school offers a splendid opportunity to progressive teachers who are prevented by force of circumstances from attendance on the regular nine months term. Practically all courses offered during the regular term are offered during the summer term. It is, therefore, possible for student teachers to complete a full year of work in three summer sessions. The buildings have been completely overhauled and renovated. All rooms are cool and well ventilated. A large faculty, each a specialist in his own line, has been selected. There will be room and accommodations for all.

Some of the regular teachers will be away during the summer on leaves of absence doing advanced work in other and eastern universities. Strong men and women will be here to take the places of those who are absent.

SUMMER NORMAL INSTITUTE.
Work preparing students for examinations for all classes of certificates will be offered in accordance with the rules and regulations of the State Department of Education. Textbooks used will be those recommended by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Regular teachers of the college will teach in the summer normal. In addition to those teachers, a number of leading public school men of the State have been secured for both regular college and summer normal work.

Examinations in the second series only are offered and the full ten weeks of review will give time for thorough comprehensive work. A number of courses are so arranged that students may receive credit therefor, and at the same time secure sufficient review for the summer normal examinations.

EXPENSE.
A matriculation fee of four ($4.00) dollars is paid by all students; two dollars of this is returned to the student upon withdrawal from school provided all books loaned students are returned to the library in good condition. There is no charge for tuition. The fee named admits the student to all classes and to both summer normal and college classes. All students may therefore enter school and attend both college and summer normal classes and receive free use of all textbooks for a maximum charge of two dollars. Board is reasonable, being offered at eighteen dollars per month up.

The W. L. Mayo Literary Society.

The W. L. Mayo Literary Society met Friday night and installed all the new officers for the spring term. The officers all took their place. The name of the officers was as follows:

President, J. C. Samuel.
V-President, C. J. Mayo.
Secretary, Ray Rodgers.
Asst. Secy., Roy Morgan.
Treasurer, C. J. Murphy.
Critic, I. R. Currie.
Chaplin, H. R. Bland.
Sergeant at arms, L. A. Hatcher.
Reporter, J. F. Bland.
Tellers, Jessie Denis and Clyde Robertson.

Mr. Samuel made a speech which was enjoyed by all. He told of his aim to build up the society. All the rest of the officers made a speech before they took their place, pledging themselves to do their best to fill the office.

Mr. Koonce, a former student of this school, visited the society and made an excellent talk. The society was strengthened by two members which we think to be ones who will take a part, and do all in their power to build up the society.

The boys who do not come to the society do not know what a great thing they are missing. We would be glad to have all the boys to come out and join, then we would have one of the best societies in the state. Come and see what we are doing.

REPORTER.

Miss Watkins was learning to knit a few days ago. She asked permission to visit her home. The permission was granted, but the Dean felt a great responsibility as she feared that Miss Watkins in her enthusiasm over the knitting would forget to get off of the train.

What Makes a Nation Great?

Not serried ranks with flags unfurled,
Not armored ships that gird the world,
Not hoarded wealth nor busy mills,
Nor cattle on a thousand hills,
Not ssgaw wile, nor schools nor laws,
Nor boasted deeds in freedom's cause,
All these may be and yet the State
In eye of God be far from great.

That last is great which knows the Lord,
Whose songs are guided by His Word,
Where breathing in His native air
man,
Where love controls in art and plan,
Where breathing in his native air
Each soul finds joy in praise and prayer,—
Thus may our country, good and great;
Be God's delight—man's best estate.

A Just and Lasting Peace.

The essential principles that must underlie peace, as stated by President Wilson, should be constantly kept in mind. They show the greatness and unselfishness and justice of America's war aims. Briefly they are:

- (1) The final settlement of this war must be based upon essential justice and each particular case adjusted as will most likely bring a permanent peace.
- (2) Peoples and Provinces are not to be bartered about as if they were mere chatties and pawns in a game.
- (3) Every territorial settlement must be made in the interest of and for the benefit of the populations concerned and not by way of compromising claims of rival States.
- (4) National aspirations must be accorded all the satisfaction possible, without introducing new or perpetuating old elements of discord.

Proverbs.

Silence is more eloquent than words.—Carlyle.
Men are born with two eyes and one tongue that they may see twice as much as they say.—Cotton.
If you would know the value of money, try to borrow some.
He who serves well need not fear to ask his wages.
Fire, water and money are good servants but bad masters.
Let not the man be trusted who has no music in his soul.—Shakespeare.
The surest way to hit a woman's heart is to take aim kneeling.—Jerold.
A man with little learning is like a frog who thinks its puddle a great sea.
Beware the fury of a patient man.—Dryden.
He that asketh faintly, beggeth a denial.

A. D. Monroe has entered school. He has been teaching in East Texas, but has moved to Commerce to attend school during the spring and summer.

Preston Travis has withdrawn from school to engage in farming.

What Are You Going to Do to Help the Boys?

Your Uncle Sam is calling now on every one of you.
If you're too old or young to fight, there's something else to do.
If you have done a bit before don't let the matter rest—
For Uncle Sam expects that every man will do his best.

CHORUS

What are you going to do for Uncle Sammy?
What are you going to do to help the boys?
If you mean to stay at home while they're fighting o'er the foam,
The least that you can do is buy a Liberty bond or a two—
If you're going to be a sympathetic miser.
The kind that only lends a lot of noise,
You're no better than the one who who loves the Kaiser.
So get up and go out to help the boys!—(2) Boys! D. S.

It makes no difference who you are, or where you came or how.
Your Uncle Sammy helped you then and you must help him now.
Your brothers will be fighting for your freedom over there,
And if you love the Stars and Stripes then you must do your share.

CHORUS.

Our Part.

The men who cross the sea to fight under the American banner in this great war for world-freedom have a right to expect those of us who remain behind to support them valiantly. We are reminded daily of the nation's needs, and a whole-hearted response to every demand is essential to a successful termination of the war. These appeals are not impersonal; they are addressed to you and me, not a man, woman, or child in America but is vitally concerned in the issue, and we are all, in a very true sense, factors in the mighty struggle.

When the boys come sailing home we want to be able to meet them with a consciousness that we have failed at no point to strengthen and sustain them. We shall be grateful to them when it is all over; it is our business now to establish a firm basis for a reciprocal gratitude on their part.

The soldier and sailor fights only half the battle; we on this side of the wide water can not shirk our obligation to supply our half of the fighting power. Every household, every field in America must play its part in this struggle.

There must be no heartache in the day of peace, no regrets that we might have hastened the end by a keener realization of our responsibilities. The thousands over there must never question the loyal cooperation of the thousands over here.—Ex.

G. W. Koonce has finished his school in West Texas and is now doing college work here. He and Mr. Monroe are old students here.

Miss Lois Bludworth visited her parents at Pecan Gap the latter part of last week.

No Wheat Food Served at Hotels.

DALLAS, Texas, April 3.—Hereafter until the close of the scarcity of wheat the Adolphus Hotel will not use any wheat products, R. B. El-liff, manager of the Adolphus, so telegraphed Monday morning.

This was done in accordance with the action taken by 500 representative hotel and restaurant men meeting with Herbert C. Hoover in Washington Saturday. The following cablegram was sent by Mr. Hoover to these foreign food ministers: Victor
Boret of France, Lord Rhondad of Great Britain and Signor Crespi of Italy:

"At a special meeting in Washington 500 leading hotel men from all parts of the United States Saturday pledged themselves to abolish absolutely the use of wheat products in their hotels until the next harvest in order that through their savings and their example shipments of wheat to the allies may proceed without interruption. Hoover."

Addresses Not Given.

At the Memorial exercises held in the College auditorium on March 14, very excellent addresses were delivered by Messrs. W. A. Thomas and F. B. Horton of Dallas. These addresses failed to appear in the Memorial Edition of The East Texan of Thursday, March 21, on account of the fact that their manuscripts did not reach the staff soon enough for publication. By special request of the staff, Mr. Horton forwarded an outline of his address and by his permission, it is given in this issue of the paper. The staff expresses regret at not being able to publish the address of Mr. Thomas, as he made a most capable and inspiring talk on that occasion.

Following is the address of Mr. Horton:

His Worth as a Personal Friend.

Hon. F. B. Horton.

It is a refreshing privilege to speak of the value of the friendship of one's benefactor.

I suppose that personal friendship is the most valuable thing in all the world. When some ominous storm of adversity has swept away the last vestige of one's material possessions; when tragedies and reverses have changed one's sunshine into a visionless Black Friday, and left him staggering hopelessly on the rocks; or even when one has never known the blessings of possessions or the visions of improved conditions and circumstances, then it is that the gentle voice and the steady hand of a friend are needed to reclaim such a person and set him right. Only a friend can reclaim one so beaten and defeated, illumine his vision beyond the circumstance of himself, and set his feet toward the road that leads to the sloping heights ahead. One will listen in a different spirit to the voice of a friend. An indifferent person or even an instructor, he will regard with suspicion.

There are many outstanding examples of personal friendship in history. We like to think about the spirit back of that fidelity which voiced its expression in the beautiful covenant that bound Jonathan and David in a friendship closer than that of "sworn" love. We are thrilled always with the matchless story of Ruth and Naomi. When Naomi must return from the land of Moab, she would persuade beautiful Ruth to remain with her own people and their strange gods, but poor heart-broken Ruth clave unto her, and said: "Treat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if I ought but death part thee and me."

And that touch of universal and brotherly friendship in the services rendered by the passing Samaritan to the strange Jew, beaten by the wayside, is the unescapable example of all men in all ages.

But I have yet to find in history or in fiction a human friendship more challenging than that which characterized the man whose life we commemorate in this service.

I knew him as few men had an opportunity to know him. I treasure the memory of the evenings I spent alone with him during the winter of 1912. He seemed to find a peculiar joy in relating to me exciting incidents of his boyhood life. It might have been because I was such an attentive and interested listener to his stories of mutual interest to us both. He was infinitely more committed to me in those things than ever he was in his business places, and yet I am sure that he revealed to me many things that few, if any others, ever knew.

He never found it necessary or thought it expedient to take even his friends very extensively into his confidence.

There was a thrilling warmth about his friendship. You remember, when you had returned from a few months or a few years absence, how he would grasp your hand in the most fatherly sort of way, and say: "Well, well, well—I'm glad to see you." But it was not the molly-coddle sort of friendship. It was a friendship that made you stand up like a man. It should shame us who know his friendship, felt his powerful personality, and listened to his teachings, ever to have a commonplace or sordid little thought, or to do a mean, contemptible thing.

Like Moses, who was the friend of a race, this man was a friend to all who needed and would receive his friendship. He was a friend for what he could give, and not for what he might receive. He asked nothing; he desired absolutely nothing save the appropriation by the recipient of that which he gave.

His service to others seemed always to be inspired by mutual adversity. He would not permit himself to lose the sense of struggle, and he sought always to aid those in struggling circumstances. He could never withhold—not even from the stranger whom he knew could and would never pay—privileges and opportunities of the Institution which stood as an expression of his friendship and concern for those who could not help themselves.

Driven on as if himself driven by some overmastering power, he waged a continuous offensive against ignorance. He could not withhold his counsel from those who needed it, and get peace out of his acquiescence and have never known another man who could give so much of a determining personality as could be. To me, that was the richest treasure of his friendship. Many of his best teachers, who might have been content to remain here, were moved on to larger institutions by the spell of his magnetic precepts and examples for growth and advancement.

Some years ago, a man of great worth in Washington City, picked up Sam H. Green, a poor little waif, from the streets and sent him to school. The boy's record in college and seminary was all that his benefactor could desire. That boy is now one of the most brilliant preachers in America, and is pastor of one of the largest churches in Washington. The other day, every dollar of the wealth of the man who had helped the poor boy was swept away in an all conflagration. A friend, coming to sympathize with this great strong man who had lost all, said, "I am so sorry, I understand that you lost everything." No, no, said the man, "I saved a fortune in Sam Green."

W. L. Mayo bequeathed to the State of Texas a legacy more valuable than all the material wealth of the world.

But the lives of twenty thousand ex-students; the beneficiaries of his generosity and kindness; the new vision which he put into the minds of his people, all voice the value of his friendship more potently and more eloquently than I could proclaim from this rostrum in a thousand years.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS EARN THEIR WAY

Austin, Texas, March 16.—The percentage of students of the University of Texas who earned part or all their expenses while attending that institution has ranged close around 40 per cent of the total attendance each year since the year 1904, according to statistics that have been kept since then. The percentage of students attending the medical department who earned all or part of their expenses has been larger than that of the main university. The record as to the medical department was not begun, however in this report, until the year 1908. The statistics for the main university and the medical department of the total number of students who earned their way through the institution each year follows:

Year 1904-05, main university, 267 students, 37 per cent.
Year 1905-06, main university, 494 students, 39.1 per cent.
Year 1906-07, main university, 627 students, 44 per cent.
Year 1907-08, main university, 652 students, 41.2 per cent.
Year 1908-09, main university, 612 students, 39.9 per cent; medical department, 145, 48.3 per cent; total number of students 757, average 41.3 per cent.
Year 1909-10, main university, 586 students, 37.7 per cent; medical department, 181, 48.7 per cent; total number of students 767, average 38.7 per cent.
Year 1910-11, main university, 601 students, 35.9 per cent; medical department 111, 42.4 per cent; total number of students 712, average 36.6 per cent.
Year 1911-12, main university, 625 students, 38.8 per cent; medical department, 104, 45 per cent; total number of students 729, average 34.2 per cent.
Year 1912-13, main university, 880 students, 41.1 per cent; medical department, 122, 48.8 per cent; total number of students 1,002, average 42.4 per cent.
Year 1913-14, main university, 917 students, 40.6 per cent; medical department, 131, 47.4 per cent; total number of students 1,048, average 41.3 per cent.
Year 1914-15, main university, 965 students, 42.2 per cent; medical department, 157, 62.8 per cent; total number of students 1,122, average 43.6 per cent.
Year 1915-16, main university, 1,029 students, 42.5 per cent; medical department, 162, 60.9 per cent; total number of students 1,191, average 45.3 per cent.
Year 1916-17, main university, 1,137 students, 43.5 per cent.

Classified as to men and women students earning all or part of their expenses, the record is as follows:

Main University—Men earning part of their expenses, 1914-15, 417; 1915-16, 442; 1916-17, 407. Men earning all of their expenses, 1914-15, 415; 1915-16, 425; 1916-17, 531. Total number of men earning part or all of their expenses, 1914-15, 832; 1915-16, 867; 1916-17, 938. Percentage of men earning part or all of their expenses, 1914-15, 53.88 per cent; 1915-16, 55.25 per cent; 1916-17, 57.75 per cent.

The following young people were our visitors from Paris last week to attend the plays presented by the Beveraux players: Misses Martha Barnett, Marvin Coleman, Catherine Anderson, Fiedde Hammond, Helen McMurray, Vivian Lambkin, Catherine Harms, Wilma Knight, all of the high school, Mary Lee Bowitz, Mary Harrine, Thelma Minton of the Ward schools, and Miss Katie Freeze-teacher in First Ward. All reported a royal time and are anxious to come back to Commerce.

Miss Murrie: (After playing the Victrola)

Mr. Finley: What instruments did you hear?

Mr. Finley: I guess it was the brass band. I heard a violin.

Vice President to Visit Commerce.

The people here will be pleased to learn that among the numbers booked for the College Lyceum Course next season is Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, who will deliver a lecture in Commerce some time during the fall. Vice President Marshall ranks high among the great lecturers, which fact, together with his official position, makes him a big drawing card of chautauqua and lyceum circuits. The College management is to be congratulated on getting him.

Charles Mayo left last week for the army. Mayo was wide awake in his school work, but stood ready to answer the country's call. He will be missed by the faculty and student body and our best wishes go with him to the training camp.

Belgium may take it as a high compliment that the Germans feel they can shoot any one of the citizens and get a patriot.

Acknowledgement.

The eminent success of our Memorial Edition was in large measure due to the splendid co-operation, the willing helpfulness and the fine courtesy of our printer, The Commerce Journal. We gratefully acknowledge its high assistance to us and are glad to accord it a large part in the edition's success.

English teacher: What is she past tense of sweat?

McKenzie: Perspired.

Sparksman: Sissy (Salmon) what's the difference between a quarter and a one dollar bill?

Salmon: I don't know?

Sparksman: Seventy-five cents is all.

Reported that President Brinton received an "April fool." Is it so?
