Mr. Lutz is my task maker, I shall shall not pass. He tormenteth my thoughts with vague forbidings. He annointeth my head with handed back experiments, my test tube runneth over. Surely sulphuric acid and ammonia shall follow me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the lab. forever.

REVIVAL AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

There is a revival meeting in progress at the Methodist church in which much interest is being manifested. Rev. McIntosh of Iuka, Miss., is doing the preaching, and he is a very forceful speaker and filled with the Holy Ghost. It will do you good just to hear him deliver his sermons, even if you are already a Christian and do not feel the need of an evangelical sermon. He made the statement Sunday morning that if he said anything that you did not like, not to quit attending the services, but to come right on to the others, and you could rest assured that he would not repeat it. The writer knows that this is true, as he has been with Dr. McIntosh in several meetings and never yet has he failed to keep his word to the letter.

Bro. Phillips has charge of the music and is also a personal worker. He, too, is a consecrated man of God, and it will be uplifting to you to come under his influence.

The College students are invited to any and all the services of the meeting that they are able to attend. There is a blessing awaiting each one who heeds this invitation.

PRESIDENT BINNION SPEAKS OF GROWTH OF E. T. S. N. C. COLLEGE

Tuesday morning in chapel President Binnion made a short talk to the student body in which he described the growth of our school in the last few years. The total enrollment for the previous years was as follows, 771 for the first year, 1056 the second, 1350, 2000, and for this year it is estimated that there will be something near 2400. Who says we haven't a growing school? He just doesn't know wherewith he speaks.

Mr. Binnion gave a few reasons why we should have grown and also the obstacles that tended to stunt our growth. Among the advantages named were (1) the good impetus given us by the school under the old regime. We already had a fine school before the State took it over, and under the direction of Pres. Mayo a great work was being done. 2. The location of the college gives us a tremendous advantage. Commerce has railroads leading in five different directions: the Cotton Belt running east and west, the Texas Midland north and south, and the Cotton Belt Motor running northwest. It is situated in the best part of the state where it is perhaps the most thickly populated, and with the best people of the face of the globe. It is a good farming section, and the city itself is one of the liveliest towns of its size anywhere. This is truly a fine place for a college to be located.

Some of the drawbacks mentioned were the World War, the necessity of readjustment under the control of the State, and the loss of Dr. Mayo. No doubt this last was a severe blow to the institution, but since it was necessary that his place be filled, we seem to have a man in charge who is fully capable of discharging the duties of the office.

"If you like our school, tell all your friends; if you are not satisfied with the conditions, tell me so." This was what Mr. Binnion said in the conclusion of his talk. We heartily endorse this last statement. If you are not satisfied, tell it to us, in order that we may arrange it more suitably for you, but why should you tell those on the outside who could in no way alleviate the conditions with which you are not satisfied? This is all needless, though, since all here are well pleased with old E. T. S. N. C.

The Greenwood Hotel is now open for business. The process of renovating, papering, painting and overhauling has been completed and the entire building is as spic and span as brand new. The proprietors, Messrs. W. A. Greenwood & Son, state that they expect to give Commerce a cafe and hotel service that will be a credit to the city. They have leased for a long term the two story building on the north side of Main street, formerly occupied by the postoffice. It is a large building and provides plenty of room for a good hotel. In speaking of the policy to be pursued in conducting the business, Mr. Greenwood said that it would be run on a high plane and that nothing that savors of bad conduct of any kind whatever will be tolerated for a single minute. They invite the patronage of ladies and gentlemen.

These hotel men come to Commerce highly recommended, both as business men and as gentlemen of integrity and good character. They come to Commerce from Hereford, Texas, but formerly were in business in Mexia. They are experienced hotel men and know the game.

"THE SECRET OF HIS POWER"

BY REV. E. L. EGGER

(Address at Mayo Memorial Service)

I would be ungrateful if in my opening sentence I did not express my deep appreciation of the courtesy that brings me to this hour. As I stand here I cannot describe my feelings. I think of one who lived in the long ago. To him the voice of the infinite spoke in accents like these: Take off thy shoes for ground on which thou standest is holy. So am I impressed with the immortal influence of the man in whose honor this assembly has gathered, and the gracious words which have fallen from the lips of these who have appeared this morning convinces me of the fact that the glory of the college has in no wise departed. There are two present this morning who were of the first class of this institution, Mrs. and your speaker.

Those were the days of trial and stress and hardship. The buildings in which we attended school hardly deserve perhaps to be ranked as a college and it was there that while we studied the fire began to burn.

I have been asked to speak for a few minutes this morning on the Secret of His Power. Perhaps I knew him as intimately as anyone who shared with him the trials and privations of that time. He was a man of genius. He was an outstanding man among his fellows. He was a tall man among his brethren. He was one of the leading school men of the country. It was not his genius that made him the man he was. He was a man of personal magnetism. I was drawn to him in very strength and fascination that when as a mere lad I had my first interview with him, and I recognized that in him there was genius and there was reserve force that rarely came out except upon special occasions. He was a man too of scholarship. He was thoroughly at home in any class room, before any student body in any assemblage of people. He was easily at home among the best but it was not his scholarship that gave him his power. Some of you may be wondering what direction my remarks will take.

I am coming to the very heart, to the very soul, and the very secret of what I consider his power and that was his earnest desire always manifest to be a constructive force in the lives of men and women. There are men who are forces in the world but they are not constructive forces. There is genius which has for its object destruction as well as conservation, there are men in whose presence you shrink because you feel somehow or other that the flowers are less fragrant than they were before and that somehow you have lost something by reason of the contact, and again there are those in whose presence you enter and you feel instantly the strengthening of inspirational impulses. This was true of my friend.

I was deeply moved during the reading of the Scriptures by Brother oper. One of the most beautiful and inspirational and helpful chapel addresses that I ever heard occurred during the chapel hour in the old building that burned at Cooper, when quietly he slipped to the front and read these words: "Seest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings, he shall not stand before mean men." The most sacred resolutions and the sublimest purposes of which I was capable filled my heart that day. I knew I should never stand before kings, but I did desire to be diligent in the task that God wanted me to do. Let me go back, if you please, to the statement I made a moment ago. Sometimes W. L. Mayo was misunderstood. He had such a high regard for the boys and girls and cared so little for the dollar that sometimes

MOST POPULAR STUDENTS ELECTED

Miss Janice Jernigin and Mr. Frank Morgan were the winners in the popularity contest held in the gymnasium last Tuesday night. Had any of the classes sold as many as 100 tickets to the minstrel on the following night they would have received 5000 vote, but as neither did, the contest stood just as it did in the final ballot. Miss Jernigin was the candidate for the fourth and second years, and Mr. Morgan was the boy candidate of the first and third years.

A fool there was, and he made his prayer,

Even as you and I,
To an E. T. girl on the library stairs
Even as you and I,
He called her his "lady fair"
She called him her "hero" there;
The world called them a loving pair,
Even as you and I,

COMMERCE CLUB ENTERTAINS

Thursday morning the chapel hour was in charge of The Commerce Club. An interesting program was rendered in apple pie order. This is the Club's first year at the East Texas State Normal but despite this handicap it now has the largest membership of them all. In fact it is now larger than all the other clubs combined. It was organized in Oct. 1921 by the students of the city of Commerce.

The fostering of a closer relationship between city students and those who came from other locations; helping to place the school on the map; through systematic advertising and strict cooperation with the faculty are among the chief fundamental principles upon which it is founded.

Carl Estes is President, Howard Prim Vice President, Dudley Wynn Treasurer, and Miss Juanita McConnell Secretary. Principally the entire membership is composed of 100 per cent Americans who are live wires and boosters. Watch us grow.

men misunderstood, and I am thinking now of that great group of young men and young women who have passed under his touch and his influence, and have gone out all over this State and other sections to render helpful service, that if they knew of this hour, they would pause for a moment to speak a word of prayer for the heritage he has left. Atlanta attending a general conference of our church and went out to one of the most beautiful cemeteries in that city. I stood by the grave of Benj. H. Hill. On a plain marble slab that marked his resting place these words were inscribed: "He who saves his country, saves all things, and all things saved bless him. He who lets his country die lets all things die, and all things curse him." May I say I would not indulge in explanation that is too strong and too emphatic but in my heart this morning I feel that W. L. Mayo was one of those sturdy pioneers that entered the field of education, blazed the way and made the paths of men who have gone after him easier than they would have been before for the influence of that mighty life. I remember upon one occasion that Jesus was in the midst of a great multitude. He was healing there sufferers of all kinds and sorts, and in that group there was a poor sufferer who had been diseased for a long time and when she could not come near for the press she stretched forth her hand and her finger came into contact with his seamless robe and as her finger touched the hem of the garment she said "I shall be healed." Jesus turned aside and said some startling words, at least the thought that they were in a strange world when He asked the question. Who touched me, and one of them said: There is a crowd of humanity all about you on every hand, there are men and women who are sick and diseased, why do you ask the question, who touched you? But Jesus turned and said you have missed the mark, I am not speaking of that kind of touch, I am not talking about the multitude but, "Somebody has touched me" and it was with that spirit that our friend touched the life of men. You knew that you had been in the presence of a man; you knew that you had been in the presence of God, you who understood the personal magnetism of this friend, but above all you knew that the man who touched you had a heart the earnest purpose to be a constructive force in your life.

We have passed through the most terrible scene of bloodshed that the world has ever witnessed, more means for killing men were devised than science had ever dreamed of in the past and in this day in which we are living the task of every man and woman is to become a part of that organization force that is seeking to rebuild and bring back the glory of former days. The man who fails to be a constructive force, who puts low ideals into men instead of high and lofty aims has failed no matter what he has done. I care not how much measure of success has been attained; unless you are endowed with the earnest purpose to serve God and fulfill destiny you have failed. My friends, I am so accustomed to saying Brethren and Sisters, hear me this morning, don't let the world's idea of success so grip your hearts that you have no service for the Invincible.

Helen Keller was asked recently if blindness was not the saddest thing in all the world. You know how she is afflicted and you know how she has grown amidst all the difficulties until she stands a Queen among women, cultured, trained, Christly. She said: "No blindness isn't the worse thing it is worse to have eyes and not to see." How many there are who have eyes and yet do not see. How many there are who have hearts and yet that do not know. How many there are who can be constructive forces in human lives and build some men and women, boys and girls into noble and yet they forget the task. I wish I might emphasize that thought I never saw a young man or a young woman turned away in all my life because of poverty. If it had been W. L. Mayo's custom to turn away from the institution penniless young men and young women who sought admission to his door your speaker would have never entered. If it had been his custom to frown upon those who did not have bank accounts with which to meet their obligations men whose voices have been heard in Councils of the Nation would have never entered. Poor and penniless, living in obscurity what did that matter if the eye of my friend could see underneath it an earnest purpose to improve life and to make the best of his opportunities. Always ready to help never never turn men and women away. I am reminded of a story I heard a few years ago in a city in Germany. Two men were walking along the street and just as they passed a cottage door they heard the sound of music and one said "Let's stop and listen to their playing." They went in and there was a blind boy and girl, the boy was in the corner of the room, the girl was seated at the piano across the room.

He said I thought I heard you playing and I was interested and came in to listen. Then the boy said "We are so glad you came; would you like for me to play for you?" "Indeed we would" and he sat down to an old rickety piano and his fingers touched the key board and the soul of the blind girl responded because there was comradeship between them. He arose from the seat. "Who are you, I never heard such playing before." "My name is Beethoven", and in that little hour he had composed one of his most wonderful compositions. Poor boys and girls blind mentally, it made no difference, the master loved them and he loved them. Thank God he loved them, too.

A Scotch Highlander on one occasion invited to dinner with him a British Nobleman. The Highlander had a very obscure home and it was meagerly and poorly furnished and the British Nobleman, who possibly felt he could, treated him because of the poverty of his class and looking up he said, I see you have such poor lights in your dining room. In my palace are the most beautiful chandeliers that your eye ever beheld. So, by and by he came again, he was his guest once more. The Scotch Highlander said as he entered the dining room, "My Lord, do you see these gentlemen standing behind the chairs, each one of them is typical of the separate men of the Highlands, do you see them holding aloft the banner of their country? Here, if you please your majesty, are my chandeliers, do you think in your palace where you live there is anything more beautiful than that?" There they stood holding aloft their banners while the king sat down ashamed because he had dared to ridicule the poverty of the Scotch Highlander.

Henry W. Grady declared on one occasion standing on the marble steps of the capitol of Washington when he saw the buildings of the army and navy and witnessed a great group of men as they marched to and fro "Surely the republic is safe," but by and by he went down to Georgia, to his humble home made sacred by family devotion and he declared with the eloquence for which he was famous. The vision of the marble capitol faded and he declared the salvation of America is not in its army and its navy, but its salvation is in the homes of its people where honor and love dwell.

The musician who has held the ears of a great audience with melodies that stir the soul, feels that down in his heart there is a better song than the one that was sung. The artist who puts his best efforts and ability into his picture until it stands out a thing of life and beauty knows that in his brain there is a more beautiful picture than the one he has transferred to that canvass, and in my heart this morning I know there are depths that I have not sounded. I know there is a height that I cannot reach, I know that I cannot declare to you now. Fine words and poetry; they are so empty; and the choicest flowers that God smiles upon, if they be woven into garlands and lain upon that little mound in the Locust Grove cannot express the love and confidence and appreciation that we feel for one we loved in life and mourned in death.

I close with the thought as illustrated in the following story: There was a British Lord who had the misfortune to lose the services of his footman and during his absence his wife employed another man to take his place and by and by the time came for his master to return and the Lady said "please go to the station today and meet your master and bring him home." "I do not know him, I never saw him. How shall I be able to recognize him when he alights from the train." "You will have no trouble" she replied. "Indeed I do not understand you, can't you give me some description of him that I may know him," and in the simplest phrase that her lips could frame, she said: "You will know him as a tall man and he is always helping somebody." President Binnion, thank God for the tall men among us. The men whose hearts are devoted to the tasks of helping somebody. The world may not know but that group of young men and young women who have passed thru the portals of this institution on which were these words: Ceaseless industry, Fearless investigation; Unfettered thought, that great crowd of young men and young women if they pause this morning would say to this assembled crowd, he was a tall man who was always helping somebody.

Think of These Things

"Have petty jealousies, partiality, egoism, sectionalism, blinded us to that high plane of political thought and humanitarianism to which our forefathers ascended?"

"Is the average child of today as respectful of his or her parents and elders as the child of 15 to 20 years ago?"

"Is the average child of today as girl of today more rudely precocious and the advanced student more stubbornly self-sufficient and self-opinionated than those of a decade or more ago?"

"Has the youth of today that same genuine, wholesome respect for age and gray hairs that the youth of a decade ago exhibited, or rather, practiced as a matter of course?"

"Does the female of the species command from her contemporaries of the opposite sex those same chivalrous considerations and attentions that were bestowed on her a few years back?"

"Is there today a greater tendency toward emotionalism, toward that strangest of human maladies, hysteria, than there was ten years ago?"

"Has the average person developed greater self indulgence in things physical, to the neglect of things mental and spiritual?"

These very pertinent inquiries are being made on every hand. Not moralists and reformers alone but business enterprises are concerned with the evils which they suggest. The subject of "Civility and Christian Courtesy" will be discussed by J. G. M. Ramsey, pastor of the Presbyterian church next Sunday night. Special music, both instrumental and vocal, is being arranged for the service. You are cordially invited to be present.

DORMITORY NOTES

Miss Pauline West went to Howland, March 27, on account of illness. Miss Mary Emery spent the week end with home folks in Terrell. Miss Carmen Polk was in Greenville Friday. Miss Helen Wilson spent the week end with home folks in Greenville. Miss Gladys Hines spent the week end with home folks in Howland. Miss Clem Dean spent the week end in Greenville.

Mrs. C. Davis of Mt. Vernon has been in the dormitory with her daughter, Winnie, who is ill.

Miss Ethel Covington was called to Grapevine on account of the illness of her mother.

The new girls in the dormitory are Misses Mary, Ida, and Inez Turner of Athens; Miss Jackson and Miss Bowman. We are glad to have them with us, and bid them welcome to our student body and our activities.

Misses Ruby Terrill and Elizabeth Storrie were guests at the dormitory for dinner Thursday.

Mrs. Ramney Glanton is spending the week end in Dodd City.

Miss Nita Carlton spent the week end with Miss Gladys Hines in Howland.

Miss Leta Bolin spent Sunday in Cumby.

Miss Gene Gibson spent Sunday in Winnsboro.

On Saturday night, after the last flash of the lights Mrs. Acker excused the girls who had had dates that night, and told the boys to remain. The boys were very uneasy, thinking that they had done something radically wrong, until Mrs. Acker eased their minds by inviting them to breakfast at the dormitory the following morning, at 8:00 o'clock.

The boys came on the dot at eight the next morning, and were ushered into the dining room, where they lined themselves up on each side of the door so that they could get a good view of the aprons, boudoir caps, bedroom slippers and tousled heads of hair. The absence of paint and powder was very noticeable. Hairnets must have all been lost Saturday night.

Then the boys were asked to take seats wherever they could stand it. It was remarked by one young man that the girls he had thought to be the prettiest while on the campus were the most hideous sights he ever saw while they were at breakfast before they had a chance for the makeup.

The Freshman lingered in the hall, He did not hear the bell, And when he got to English class, Miss Murphy gave him (extra work.)

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR MEN SUNDAY

Included in the revival services now in progress in Commerce, is a special meeting for men which has been arranged for 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon at the Hippodrome Theater. Evangelist Phillips, who has been a Christian worker with men for twenty-five years, will speak to men at that meeting on a subject of very vital importance. This service will be especially advertised in The Journal before the end of the week.

Another special service is that for Saturday night at the Methodist Church when Dr. McIntosh will deliver a lecture on, "The Epochal Periods of My Life." Everybody is invited to hear this address Saturday night. The young people of the city and the students of the College and High School are included in the invitation. Fuller announcement of the Saturday night service will be made.

When Boys Are Men.

The old saw, "boys will be boys," is getting worn out. Boys will be men, and they are not waiting for their twenty-first birthday to prove it. One of the most interesting developments in the Boy Scout Movement is the civic or community Good Turn, in which all the scouts of a community turn to and do the work of men in connection with some public service. The extent to which scouts are learning citizenship through doing such things, is little guessed by the general public.

Probably a week does not go by in which scouts somewhere are not giving one or another of the following forms of community service, always under the leadership of local scout authorities and supervision of the civil authorities.

Walk-rite campaigns; displaying placards at street crossings and aiding traffic officers to inculcate habits of carefulness on the public streets.

Health campaigns; locating and reporting unsanitary conditions and distributing health department notices.

Town-beautiful campaigns; getting everybody to clean up backyards and unoccupied lots, and otherwise beautify the towns.

Tree census to preserve shade trees of the community.

Safety-first campaigns reporting all kinds of dangerous spots in the town, and cooperating with the National Safety-first Council in its program.

Red Cross work. Searching for lost children. Kindness to animals campaign, cooperating with the S. P. C. A.

Tree planting. Anti-weed crusades, both town and country.

Anti-pest campaigns investigating pools and swamps and drainage spots likely to prove breeding spots for mosquitoes and flies, distributing literature on the subject; similarly to rid communities of all destructive pests.

General services as messengers, traffic aids, guides, first-aid corps in connection with conventions and affairs.

Building and erection of bird houses.

"Running" city government for an hour.

Town boosting.

Happiness campaigns, as in collecting and repairing broken toys for Christmas distribution to poor children, distributing of Christmas and Thanksgiving "baskets," scout entertainments in children's hospitals and "homes," and similar joy-making efforts.

These and kindred good turns and troop activities constitute one distinctive phase of the citizenship-training activities of the Boy Scout program.

CHAPEL NOTES

 of chapel Thursday March 30. They rendered a very delightful program, and we shall look forward to the next entertainment they shall give us.
Miss Ruth Conants addressed the students at chapel April 1. She is a National Y. W. C. A. secretary, and is a very interesting speaker. It is a rare opportunity we have of hearing such excellent speakers as Miss Conants, and we are very glad to have had her with us.

Y. M.--Y. W. Party

The Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. gave a joint party in the Gymnasium Saturday night. It was an all fools party, and all the fools of the East Texas State Normal were there, except two (the writer was right there on the spot). We met at 8:00, and from the very first minute until 10:30 there was something going on all the time. It was just one fool thing after another. They say that life in general is just one fool thing after the other, and love at E. T. seems to be two fools after each other. This was somewhat the order in which the fun took place at the party.

Not only did we act the fool, but we got acquainted with lots of the new students of the school. We are sorry that there were not more of these new students out that night in order that we might get acquainted with all of them. To all old students as well as the old ones, let us say that you let a fine opportunity slip through your fingers when you fail to attend the parties held in the Gymnasium.

The Jazzland Minstrel troupe put on its show Wednesday night, March 29, in the College auditorium. Due to the inclement weather conditions the attendance was rather light but those who were there enjoyed the performance as much as if there had been a house full. It has not been decided whether or not this will be put on again, but in the event that it should be, before staying away you had better ask someone who was there whether or not it was worth while.

Two hearts that yearn,
For love's sweet prison,
Where 'his'n is her'n
And her'n is his'n.

A GOOD SHOW.

The Jazz Minstrel at the College on Wednesday night was thoroughly enjoyed by those who braved the threatening weather. Every member of the performance deserves praise for the efforts put forth to make it a success.

"Black Beauty" and "Circus Clowns" is the children's day show at the Hippo Thursday.
