Useage Boys Shame Strangle Lewis in Technique; Hogge Defeats Champ

"Right this way, ladies and gentlemen! The greatest attraction on the midway!"

Thus one might have been hailed last Tuesday evening about 7:30, by the boys passing in front of the Lyric Theatre on Main Street. For inside was about to be given one of the most terrific battles ever witnessed in these parts. The main attraction was the boxing match between Merie Hogge, local and Scott, champion heavyweight of Arizona. But even this did not have the interest for the crowd, who were waiting for the "wraslin" match between Birch Smith and Bill Copeland and Well, Merle knocked the champ out with a single punch.

Bill Bull had a little too much weight for Birchy and won two falls off him. It was a great fight.

STUDENT NIGHT FAILS TO BE LARGE AFFAIR

Clubs Do Not Respond; Buskins and A. R. C. Clubs' Are Sole Entrants

Very little interest was manifested in College Student Night here this year, only two clubs being represented at the occasion Friday night, May 5, at the Lyric Theatre.

What was presented proved to be of excellent quality, however, and those who attended enjoyed the small offering. The Buskins and the A. R. C. Club were the only organizations having stunts. The Buskins won.

In addition to the stunts, Miss Egan, Berion gave several numbers on the piano. Alice Ruby King and Dale Drake presented several numbers in Glee and William Daniel entertained the audience with tap dancing.

PI KAPPA DELTA MEET REPORTED VERY SUCCESSFUL

Colleges From Texas and Arkansas Send Delegates To Provincial Meet at Denton

The national forensics fraternity Pi Kappa Delta, held one of its Provincial Conventions at the North Texas State Teachers College in Denton May 2nd and 3rd. The states of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Mississippi are included in this province. Although chapters are not yet organized in this province, it had indicated their intentions to come to the meet, only Texas and Arkansas had representatives there.

The first event held Thursday night at 8:00, was the prize contest. Only two colleges entered—Simmons University and Howard Payne. Simmons won first place.

The men's debates resulted in a tie between Baylor University and N. T. S. C. The tie will be run off Thursday evening at 7 P. M. The results of the women's debates gave Simmons first and second place.

With applicants to number competition is the stride of trade.

He did it all for you; but was dogged by a terrible fate.

Students will be expected to register for the next course at the same time as they are requested to do possible. This will enable the college to keep the sections level and make such adjustments as may be necessary.

The Phillips and Simmons Debates gave Simmons first and second place.

EVERYTHING BUT BROTHERLY LOVE

College sports have not yet been put on a professional basis, and State Teachers Colleges over Texas are not paying athletes to perform for the various state schools in any line of sporting activities, but there is no harm in aiding good clean athletes in the securing of jobs.

Recently a peculiar situation, which bears mentioning in the East Texas, as the college students publication, grew out of an attempt on the part of certain E. T. S. T. C. students to secure a job for a fellow athlete.

In a Commerce business house, two college students were present, and the proprietor suggested to one of the students in regard as to whom to employ for a part time cashier's place. The student addressed informed the business man that—a good, clean, honest athlete could be had at a small salary, and would be glad to get the job. The other college student was sitting in on the conversation, and after the first student left the place to get in touch with the college coach, in reference to the open job, the second student, a man who has been teaching school for the past year, and incidentally a man who has succeeded to the degree that he purchased a new automobile and is at the present time driving it asked for the place and received it.

Was this brotherly love? Is it right to "under-ride" a college athlete, who struggles the year around to keep in E. T. S. T. C. and aids materially in placing the local college on the T. I. A. athletic map. This very thing occurred, and the East Texas wishes to bring this shining incident before the student body in order to show just how much some students are behind college athletes.

Some people have been wondering why the Lions have not been successful in the past few years; here is the answer to one of the most important questions.

LEARNING TO DRIVE

Learning to drive oneself is the key to success. No matter how well educated a person may be, if he does not have the will power and energy to drive himself to do the tasks confronting him, his education is a failure. The road to success is a slow and weary grid, but we must learn the art of forcing ourselves to do the job, no matter how much we dislike it, before we can have any hope of reaching the pinnacle of success.

The art of driving oneself is especially important for engineers. It is more than that; it is absolutely necessary. An engineer must force himself to work out problems and overcome difficulties from the time that he starts college and until he retires.

Let us learn to drive ourselves while we are in college and the drive necessary in later life will take care of itself.

RADICALS AND CONSERVATIVES

There are two types of people that are outstanding in life. First, there is the man with a gesture, the man who would make of life one long uninterrupted sensation. There is a hint of independence in this philosophy, the man who tells the whole world that he isn't interested in them or what they masses do. This too often borders on sensationalism but when it is done with a sincerity of feeling and an engulfing belief in the right or lack of right that when Napoleon was crowned or a Caesar arises to gain mastery of the world, it almost ever brought down to modern times. For example, almost every man of note that has not built up some imitation of success in the form of a stolid conservatism, is a man who was in the next contrast with the established order of things. In the field of literature there is Eugene O'Neill, one of the greatest playwrights that ever lived. What does he care of conventions? They are the very things that set him on his career that he has done so well with. Take Upton Sinclair and Sinclair Lewis. They were both bored with the nice conservative little village and their reaction flared up into worthwhile literature and fame for them.

The list is long of men that have gone against the masses in an idea or a belief that is in contrast with some age-old precedent and in most cases they have succeeded in bowing the majority to their will. Take for instance, the men who first had the dream of a transcontinental railroad or the Atlantic cable. Were they praised for those ideas before they worked out successfully in practice what their inventors knew to be true in theory? Such men are world builders no matter how radical their plans seem to be, and usually the more radical they seem the better they are when put into practice.

The other type of man is of course, the conservative, the one who profits off the labors of others in blazing a trail. They are the world's definition of a success, a few thousand a year, the good path to be trod each day, a end and dried pattern of life, the highest pinnacle of Fatalism, one achievement in their low drone of life.

Thanks to the radicals there are great cities, mighty bridges, and networks of railroads that traverse the continent, and literature that is appreciated only by the enlightened—thanks to the conservatives there are children and marriages.

PREJUDICE AND PROGRESS

In the university science course called "high school" the so called "scientific attitude." Why is it necessary for science professors to avoid every subject which has this subject which is not a direct part of their course? It is a method of eliminating prejudice—an attitude which, if present, will destroy the value of the time spent in many scientific course.

Prejudice resembles in a manner the latitude of the journeyman who is already made. He is not in a case which is being tried, and who therefore, cannot give a just estimate of the evidence presented to him. Prejudice is all in the path of progress; those who will go forward must first means of moving or circumventing it. The science professor's attitude on the scientific attitude.

On the part of the individual the situation of prejudice involves the opening of the mind, the disregard of tradition for a time willing suspension of disbelief. New facts may then be presented to the mind for acceptance or rejection upon a sound and thoughtful basis. The wheel may then be unwound from the shaft, new things, new facts may be built upon those of the past, building higher and higher the mound of progress. As a just and firm foundation—open mind—M. N. in Bayler Lectures.

DEBATORS TAKE TWO

Charles Brooks and Norris Hiett represented the College debaters in the first included debate with the Southwestern University, at Georgetown, and Baylor University, at Waco. The question debated was, Resolved: That there should be a substitute for trial by jury.

The debate with Southwestern was held Thursday, April 18; the College team winning by a 2 to 1 decision. On the following Friday evening, Brooks and Hiett met Baylor University. The debate being held at Waco, a small city about twenty miles from Waco. The College debaters defeated Baylor by a 2 to 1 decision.

The boys reported that they were marveled and treated very courteously while they were guests at the institutions visited—Campus beat.

OPTIMISM VS. PESSIMISM

"A cynic is a man who is near-sighted and looks about," says William George Jordan. "He sees the evil in his heart and thinks it was the worst." A cynic takes a pessimistic view of everything. He goes about with the conviction of the month turned down giving advice that is unwanted and unappreciated. He doubts the good of forward movements, he neither contributes nor creates. He moves as the faith of others and shirks his own responsibilities at every opportunity. He takes an insane delight in the success of others, but he sees the means by which he can bring ruin as a boomerang to destroy himself.

Opposed to the cynic and pessimist is the optimist whom Mr. Jordan defines as a person who has succeeded in associating with humanity without becoming a cynic. He takes the view that if man does the best that he can by the light that he has, then he has no need to worry; neither should any man expect to do so.

There are two types of people in the world—optimist and pessimist. The optimist is the one who sees the good in every situation. He is the one who is continually telling us about the "good old days," who feels that life is long and sunny, or who doesn't know what is going to become of the younger generation, they don't like the way they live, but we've become quite useful. (Dry Wit.)

The cynic is an inspired looking person who thinks only of himself. He wants to get more out of this world than God put into it, and he wants it for nothing. He loves health, efficiency, happiness, good names or good things. On the other hand, the optimist is one who looks for the good in every situation, he is the one who is continually telling us about the "good old days," who feels that life is long and sunny, or who doesn't know what is going to become of the younger generation, they don't like the way they live, but we've become quite useful. TODAY I STOOD ALONE

Today I stood alone
Within the house of Time,
On a barren floor alone
Between great walls so high
The vaulted roof seemed miles
And miles beyond the sky.
And from the vaulted roof
Down to the floor and me,
With figures in effigy
Of those who once had stood
Here.
Who now make history.

Among the green trees,
My eyes passed rapidly;
I saw both low and fair,
The laughing, and the sad,
And some were tinted purple,
And some were tinted gold.
In the light that from the windows
Shown down upon the dead—
The people who had lived
In purple, gold, and red,
The people who had lived and Lived.
And now were only dead.

And as I looked on down,
I saw the space each one
Had gained by his renown,
The space he had won,

Joe Machine Invented

Joe Bekins and Clarence McElrath, senior engineering students, have received a patent for a plan by which they hope to gain social popularity. However the details remain a secret, but it may be a few personal use only. It will take the form of a one cylinder motor which will be used by thought waves. It will contain an automatic heating system and emergency stop controls. Other details furnished on receipt of special self-addressed stamped envelope and envelope. The invention and mystery attaching it has naturally stirred up much enthusiasm among the students who, in their recent unappreciated movement to control campus affairs by themselves, have become quite useful. The oratorical contest for girls resulted in a victory for Baylor College for Women. Sara Louise Taylor shared second place with the N. T. representatives.

The men's oratory had eight contestants: Ouchilla; Arkansas, West Texas and N. T. Woodson. There were also eight contestants in the men's extempore contest. Again Ouchilla won first place, with Howard Payne taking second.

The East Texas State Teachers College had the following students in the contest. Girls' Debate: Rae Phillips, and Elizabeth Doanier. Men's Debate: William Jones and Norman Galyon. Girls' Oratory: Sara Louise Taylor; Men's Oratory: Carl Thomas; Men's Extempore: Oscar Adams.

Thursday evening the delegates met around the banquet table and adopted a fine program that has been prepared with the delightful three course dinner.

College students will register for their subjects each six weeks and physical education, and sub-college students will register for not more than four subjects for the twelve weeks and physical education.

EPWORTH LEAGUE

If you want to be with a lively bunch of people, just come out to the Methodist church Sunday evening at 8:45.

There will be a most entertaining program that one should not miss.

Sarah Marshall led a very interesting program last Sunday evening on "Education and What It Means to Us." Barbara Swartzell read two very suitable selections and Carrie Mae Caruthers gave an interesting talk on "Education."

Since there are so many Methodist students on the campus, it shouldn't be such a difficult problem to have at least one hundred new members added to the League roll. Students are urged to attend the League meetings, where they will receive a warm welcome.

"RED LIPS" SHOWS COLLEGE LIFE TODAY

The tendency of girls and boys of today to vie with each other in the pursuit of pleasure is touched upon with accurate psychology in "Red Lips." Universal picture of ultra-modern college youth which will open here at the Hippodrome Theatre Friday.

The picture presents the contrasts of a youth of unusually high ideals who falls in love with a girl whose philosophy of life is of the most extremely modern type. They are both of college age, the susceptible period, and the girl's love of pleasure exerts a marked influence on her companion. Cynthia and Buddy are saved from themselves when the boy's roommate takes a hand.

Search has been conducted on the screen with real truth in "Red Lips" according to critics. Director Melville Brown has set the glamorous side of college and university life before screen audiences with sincere understanding.

"Red Lips" is from a story by Percy Marks, author of "The Flamingo," sensational college life novel of last season.

INTELLIGENCE

Intelligence is that little something which a few of us have, none of us are striving for, and all of us would like to possess! Intelligence is the essence of wisdom. It cannot be obtained from books, as some of us seem to think, or from "prof." It is not abstract, nor is it engrained. It is not a happen so, and is not altogether the result of study. It is, then, the perfect balance between study and experience. Ability to reason is the foundation of intelligence. A sense of proportion and association is necessary to reach the high state of mental clarity. It can be of varying degrees and still be intelligence. Many people do not know what this much sought-after quality is. They assume that a brilliant student is an intelligent person. This is not always true. The really great intellect must be rounded and moulded by a knowledge of many and varied subjects and not a special ability at any particular thing.

If you have followed me this far and have gotten all the hidden meaning of my epigrammatic pronouncement, you have a fair degree of intelligence. If not, your intelligence hump needs a try to the barber's shop, and your shoes get a new pair of heels. Thanks.—The J. T. C.

PROBLEMS IN VISUAL EDUCATION OUTLINED

The need for a more pedagogical use of all visual materials in class rooms was emphasized by Mrs. Anna W. Dorris, President of the Department of Visual Instruction of the National Education Association and director of visual instruction in the California State Teachers College at San Francisco, in an article in the May Journal of the National Education Association.

"The value of the motion picture," says Mrs. Dorris, "has been somewhat overestimated and it has been used indiscriminately, often as a substitute for, rather than supplementary to, other means of instruction."

Books and illustrative material must show up in each other. Children must have various types of concrete aids to help them build up a rich background which will serve as a basis for comparing, judging and acquiring new knowledge. The perfection of modern photography has placed in the hands of teachers just the means needed to bring this background, this wealth of experience necessary for efficient growth and development on the part of every child.

In her recommendation to the general technique of presenting visual aids to instruction, Mrs. Dorris recommends that it be made flexible to meet the needs and interests of the pupils. She adds, however, that "there are certain fundamental principles governing teaching and learning which are based on accepted theories of psychology and these basic principles must be recognized and adhered to in using any type of educational tool, be it a book, a map, an exhibit, or a motion picture."

"It is of first concern that teachers have a realistic conception of the nature of the child and how he develops. If thought is clear and natural, normal processes and methods will almost inevitably follow, because they will be correctly motivated."

CHILDREN ARE BORN WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE

"The child is born without knowledge or judgments. All he ever possesses must be acquired under the guidance of society," writes Professor Harold Saxe Tuttle of the University of Oregon. In the third of his series of articles on "The Rights of the Child," Tuttle says that they were likely to hurt the home. The high school boy who joined in a hastily suggested prank didn't know that he would be expelled from school and his whole future handicapped. The revelation made by juvenile court officials cry out to society that the child has a right to intelligence on every subject affecting his future moral choice.

CAN NATION AFFORD TO EDUCATE ITS CHILDREN?

"We need not deduce ourselves into thinking that the nation can afford to do let them go but by all its youth," writes Roy Kimerling, Editor of the Journal of the National Education Association in his May editorial.

The editorial continues: "People move about easily and depend much upon each other. We are one in the end and our children will be more intimately dependent upon the intelligence and good spirit of their fellows than we are today. The slow and sure process of education is the only way out.

"Our people have started upon that way and they dare not turn back for it is the way of freedom and achievement. All that we put into the schools, come back magnified.

"We put a dollar into education and gather two from our commerce; we build technical schools and found new industries; we draw four million of our young people into high schools and lay the foundation for a new civilization.

"We cannot afford to stultify education—fundamental alike to individual success and national security. Let us rather look that money wisely spent for good schools in an intelligent investment which every community must according to its resources, its needs, and its ambitions for its children.

"The shooting of playmates in the war, the drowning of cardraders in aquatic dairs; the deaths from hazing and initiations; the instances of imitations caused by fright resulting from practical jokes; the blighted careers and broken character development upon some ignorant choice; and the prostitution of business and political blunders growing out of false theories constitute a cumulative argument for the intellectual equipment of youth which society must be blind not to heed.

"Since the child is dependent on society for his equipment of knowledge and his training in the functioning of that knowledge in judgments and there his happiness and prosperity are so intimately bound up with the effectiveness of his intellectual equipment, it is his right to be equipped with that equipment and in full knowledge of the equipment and its use, never to be faced with the occasion for decision."

"WILD ORCHIDS" FASCINATES SCREEN AUDIENCES

The eternal triangle, as it has been so often called, is with us again at the Hippodrome Theatre in a new and unusual combination, revolving about Greta Garbo in one of the most powerful roles of the year, "Wild Orchids," the picture, featuring the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer imprint, in which Miss Garbo appears to such advantage, can truly be described as one of the most fascinating films of the season.

Miss Garbo plays with "modesty" and distinction a pin-stained wife of an American business man who unwittingly drives her to the arms of another and unlured man, Lewis Stone, always a competent player, handles the husband part with great skill, and Nils Asther, who seems to be the most promising young leading man, does splendid work in the part of a Japanese prince.

Sidney Franklin, the director of this picture, has succeeded not only in guiding the play through their difficult interpretations with ingenuity, but has also created a mood and background of romance for this tale of passion. The scenes of Japanese life are admirably handled.

Above all else, however, it is Greta Garbo's fascinating beauty and extraordinary playing which makes this film one of those cinematic offerings which one cannot afford to miss.

"For every boy that 'busts out' there is a girl who helps, say the protesters."

WHEN A WOMAN DRIVES

Dr. Winters of the University of Pennsylvania has made a very interesting survey of Automobile records. His reports state that women drivers become involved in accidents three times as often as men.

At first blush this seems to be rather an indictment of the woman who drives. But let us examine the fact further.

Most of the accidents in which women are involved are minor ones. They are able to act intuitively and quickly in an emergency, and it is there a few damage from accidents in which men are involved.

In addition, most of the accidents that happen to women drivers are the result of their carelessness. They drive slowly, and are struck for more. Frequently than they strike other cars, leaving the brunt of the fall-sensess of others.

However, it is a common failing of the smooth driver to be inclined to choose the greater of the road, and at his home in Akron.

George M. Lacker spent the week and at his home in Akron.

Mary Gillis was a visitor on the campus last week.
