Week

Wm. R. McDaniel

"Craig" Will drew a much longer attendance than did the "True Yodel," which was the first presentation of the Little Theatre this season. The play was very good. This week notes that the public appreciates this type of entertainment more than it does the vaudeville type.

It is the general opinion of the American public that China is backward nation. This belief has been proved false, however, and we see that China is ultra-modern. This is verified by the fact that their 1930 revolution is a very easy one.

This week notes that the "Red Bull" ruckus is on the decline on the campus at present. This is partially due to the fact that the Lions have no game this week, and also because we look to Canyon on the 13th. However, this spirit will undoubtedly be revived by the San Houston game on November 1. Also, the maximum on November 11.

Our editor-in-chief, having been weighing upon the cells of his grey matter, has come over eventually "one" and has accordingly arranged the furnishings in the East Texas Office. Hereafter, changes in the first issue of the week by the amount of paper on the floor, but since this is not an accurate method to resort to the use of the calendar.

CLASS INSPECTS HOMES IN DALLAS

The class in Home Economics 214, Household Management, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Storie, head of the department was in Dallas on Saturday last week, inspecting some of the newly built and modern furnished homes, found out in Greenway Parks, a beautiful new section to Dallas.

Six homes were critically examined, among which was a beautiful home of "Stucco," furnished exclusively in the modern style which was open for inspection, after which the class returned to the city and had lunch at the Golden Pheasant. Most of the afternoon was spent in the furniture stores, studying and observing the different types of furniture and later the night went to the State fair to see the exhibits that might prove of interest to those members of the trip were: Miss Elizabeth Storie, Miss Fitcher, Will Harrison, Alvane Lown, Eunice Burt, Pearl Blythe, Martha Farris, and Frances Thacker.

Barymore Objects To Climate In Studio

A Swiss mountaineer's costume and equipment are fine when it is raining or it peaks in the teeth of a raging gale, but the same costume, when it is used in powerful light—that's different.

As John Barymore. He knows from peering experience that the clothes that will appear during the latter part of November. The various details of the costumes, and a new department will be introduced in the coming week. A short story will be illustrated.

Of course we are wild about the new costumes that are being made in the East Texas Office. Hereafter, changes in the first issue of the week by the amount of paper on the floor, but since this is not an accurate method to resort to the use of the calendar.

LIONS LOSE TO WEST TEXAS

Edging away from the Lions in the last half of the play, the local team started on the Lion field 18-7. The game was a thriller from start to finish and not until the last few minutes of the fourth quarter was the game clinched by the victors.

E. T. ROOTERS

There appeared on the campus, Saturday morning before the Northstars game, a thin man who strolled leisurely about, and not finding anything interesting, he wandered about until three thirty and then went to the football game. He called aloud for help and no one answered him, so he thought that he had been fooled about the football game and his way slowly back to the village.

Two weeks later this same person was seen on the campus, just before the game with the Canyon Buffaloes, and to his surprise, the place did not seem the same. Hundreds of helping hands were extended him and he almost believed that he had mistaken the place. But he might be wrong, as he was carrying an enthusiastic group of students to the old auditorium and there the cries and yells were so loud that the old man was forced to retire to a quieter place. Early the next morning Old Grandpa was back on the campus and was treated as though he were a prince. He was interested in knowing what had happened to bring about this sudden change and was informed that E. T. had walked up an d was again into the world of pop that had always been prevalent about the campus. At 2:45 he began to hear harmonious noises coming from the stadium and he was distinct that it was able to follow them into the stadium.

The grand stand was no place for this old feeble man. He lost his hat and cane and finally trying of the loud noises retreated to the far side of the park and vanished after the game.

Does this narrative have any moral? The spirit that was shown from the sidelines a the last game was really so different that one would really have thought he was in a different place. The members of the Dandy team were dressed in full new uniforms and the play was performed uniformly between the two teams and they were very few instances when the cheer leaders called for help that the whole grand stand didn't respond.

Keep that pep at the boiling point! And when there is an enemy to face, let it beat over—then we'll have wholesale pep free of charge.

REMARKS HEARD IN GIRLS DORM:

Place: Club room
Time: After 10:30
Cause: A group of the studious dormitory girls, in whispers:
"Ove me my pencil!"
"What that good pie we had for dinner?"
"Who did she have a date with last night?"
"Get your foot out of my chair!"
"Oh, isn't he the cutest boy?"
"Don't make so much noise."
"Have you written that letter?"
"And what else did she say?"
"Who did?"
"He said he'd buy me a car."
"I can't stand."
"Neither can I."
"I wish I had an ice cream cone."
"Who can stand? Who can wear shoes?"
"Yeah, shee good at that."
"Give me an idea for a paper."
"My mountain pen is dry."
"Change her hair that night."
"What time is it?"
"What's in chapel in the morning?"
"Did Mrs. Acker find her dress?"
"It looks like him."
"How many specials has she got this week?"
"12!"
"Can you vote this year?"
"That Chalmers initiation was terrible."
"Let's read the kitchen."
"Did she give you a call-down?"
"Oh, shaking the table."
"Bill was sent out of the library."
"He's the worst prof. I ever had."
"Do you gotta go?"
"Do you suppose we'll get two more?"
"The Single Standard was wonderful!"
"I wish I was under Miss Mies Garcia."
"I'd so far into the night."

CHAPEL PROGRAMS

There seems to be a group of students on the campus who attend the chapel assemblies but think that they have the privilege of leaving before the assembly is officially dismissed. It is true that the assembly is against such behavior, but it's shows discourteousness and lack of respect for the performers. It would be better if the chapel programs do to the amusement and diversion of the students. The following is the program, we should show our appreciation for their talent by staying throughout the entire program. Our chapel is not compulsory, therefore, if there is any one who does not appreciate the entertainment furnished therein, his absence from the assembly would be to the advantage of all concerned. Please try to practice the usual courtesies, and the performers will appreciate the improvement of behavior to be shown.

Careless Concentration

Bill and Anne were college students. Bill was a very clever young man, and Anne was a very clever young woman. Bill was the hero of this story and Anne was the lovely heroine. Now that you love the hero and the heroine, I must take you into the village.

Mr. Jones was a college professor. Now that you have the within, I will proceed with the story.
One day, in class, Mr. Jones said, "Now, my dear students, as you all know, the best is not connected with the rest of the body by anything other than the neck. Also, you understand that the whole rest of the body is the price of a child raised by a Jew in a Greek restaurant in Peru. It is not necessarily equal to the pressure on the oblique line of a film strip lodged from this information, as Bill and Anne told us which started first, the chicken or the egg.
Now, Anne had been writing notes to Bill and therefore, she

FORGETTING

Dear Reader, I have a whole page of copy telling about the swim that Bill and Anne took last week. I am sorry that I was so careless that part of the story. Nevertheless, while Ag and Bill are swimming, we'll just have a word, and then we'll get back to the whole student body crowd at the football game last week. I venture to say that this is the most spirit that will be shown here until we go to Denton to pick East Texas on November 11.

OCTOBER WIND

The winds are calling from the sky. They are in a burst of anger and whip a make long flames. They cut through the naked trees. Where moon shadows of leaves should be, there are now Dead Leaves rustling in the wind. Certain a "covey" whistled over. Of ropes and flame.

A SHORT STORY

Way back in the days when we used matches to light cigarettes, I imagine that a man named Alti Lays, whose mistress had the loveliest legs in all Paris, Lays was a romantic who believed in accentuating charms by introducing gorgeous contracts. Accordingly, he performed an operation on her left leg, causing it to shrink and die from the pleasure that the contract of gorgonism, at beauty afforded him.

The Alameda staff is getting way under for the publication of a great yearbook. Monday's chapter program was largely in the hands of the publication staff.
Great many names have already been made, and other phases of the yearbook are advancing in a big way. The staff needs the assistance of the student body to make the Alameda this year a possession to be proud of.

Amounts of the remittances for October as compared to remittances of the companies for September indicate that the total for October will exceed by approximately $150,000 the total of $1,070,000 for September.

S. M. U.
Recognition of S. M. U. as one of the group of national football schedule-makers who are breaking into the conference elite" was given in a recent article by Frances Wallace in the Saturday Evening Post.
The Mustangs are listed along with New York University, Carnegie Tech and Oregon State as football society climbers who are gaining prestige through their inter-sectional games with strong eastern and middle-western eleven.
"Southern Methodist," the writer says, "is doing well. The Mustangs almost stole a march on the Army in the opening game of the 1928 season, and have scheduled Navy in 1930, beating N. Y. U. to this one."

C. I. A.
Fifty-four thousand, six hundred and forty-seven dollars sounds like a lot of money when you come to think of it, but that's what some seventeen hundred C. I. A. girls spent last year for such articles as dresses, shoes, hose, cosmetics, toilet articles, and supplies.

McMillin, librarian at Louisiana State University. They represent the statistics on Southern university libraries for 1927-28.

STEPHEN F. AUSTIN S. T. C.
It made every person interested in S. F. A. feel good to see the lumberjacks came out and stop the over-rated Lions of Commerce. The Jacks showed that they had the courage (after the Lions had made here of a break to score a touchdown) to come back and tie the score. Every one seemed to get his "stander up" when the doubtful decision of the officials allowed the Lion score. Although the same ended in a deadlock as far as the percentage was concerned, the Jacks end out their mediocre football of the past and got some real fire into the game.

Sadie: The sheeb.
Tom: Dick and Harry. Three chicks.
Mr. Sixx: Sadie, old man.

Scene: Act I
Tom: I have looked almost everywhere.
And have never found a maid so fair.
Dick: Breaking heart, I come to you.
To tell you of my love so true.

Scene: Act II
Sadie: Such a line!
Dick: Oh, yes. How beautiful is the Jacks boys.
Sadie: That's the first sensible word that I've heard a man speak in many a day.

Dick: But you can hardly blame them for saying that you are beautiful.
Sadie: Heaven! You're just like the rest! How I hate men! They're all liars. I'll never meet up with another one.
Harry: Sadie, let's go to a show.

Sadie: Now you're talking sense. Let's get gone.
Dick: Harry and Sadie, Tom staggers across the stage and accidentally overturns and breaks his fish bowl. The curtain falls and hits Dick on the head.
