"His Week"

By Wm. E. McDaniel

This week notes that there has been a change made in the Little Theatre schedule. In this column last week it was announced that the next number to be presented would be the "Radio Mystery," but this arrangement has been changed so that the next presentation will be the "Swain," which was one of the biggest hits of the Dallas Little Theatre last season.

This week optimistically believes that E. T. will have a winning basketball team as usual. About serving the speaker James a Chinese song and exhibited a number of curios.

LION COURTMEN SCHEDULE TWO JANUARY GAMES

With two basketball games already scheduled with Ada Teachers College for the first and second of January, the East Texas Lions are rapidly shaping into action once the spreading quietness in the history of the college. The two games already fixed are for the first and second of January. The games will be played preceding the regular Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association bouts. The bill of T. L. A. A. games will not be set until about December 15 when a meeting of the colleges in the Association will meet in Dallas to determine the schedule of the games.

The Lions who missed the championship by only half a game last year, seemingly have a stronger team than they have ever had. Only one letter man, James Forrest Gardner, will be absent from the squad, and his position at guard is being capably filled by Oliver Stringer, who was a member of the West Texas State Teachers College team the year before and produced a championship club.

Parker, Wright, Williams, Cook and Messinger, all students of the club last year, are reporting regularly for practice. Other than the missing letter man, a wealth of other material from which Coaches Aker and Parsons will be able to choose players is at hand.

A small fee is at the beginning of each term gives each student the privilege of obtaining medical attention at the school.

He described the work of a typical mission station, illustrated some of the dangers to be avoided in speaking Chinese, traced the growing power of the Christian movement, mentioned some of the superstitious beliefs and religious practices of the people, and listed a number of individuals whose lives had been transformed by the Gospel message. At both services the speaker gave a Chinese song and exhibited a number of curios.

MANY STUDENTS WORKING WAY THROUGH SCHOOL

Over thirty per cent of the entire student body of this institution are working their way through school this year, paying a part or all of their expenses, according to an estimate made by Professor D. C. Butler, assistant instructor of English. Mr. Butler has taken a census of all the students of his English classes and found that about thirty per cent of them are engaged in some kind of work to lighten their expenses. Although this data is not official for all students, Prof. Butler states that it is probably a very good average.

The type of work done by these students shows a remarkable variation of employment. Work includes mowing lawns, cleaning windows, janitor work, and filling station service coupled with the more serious work some of the students in office, clerk in stores, work as messengers, and other types of employment.

BOOK WEEK IS OBSERVED IN E. T. LIBRARY

"Observe Book Week" says Miss Williams of the East Texas State Teachers College Library. She also states that books are an essential part of happy childhood days, and that books for young people have never been so colorful and varied as they are today. Modern book reflects manifold interests and enthusiasm of the boys and girls of our era, and the publishers expend great care on illustration and typography. Charming new editions of old favorites are issued each year and take their place alongside modern books.

PLAY LOVERS RECEIVED A GRACIOUS TREAT

Play lovers received a gracious treat when the Bellman Players presented "The Big Pond," a play written by George Middleton and A. E. Thomas, in the new auditorium last Friday night. Originally produced at the Blou Theatre, New York, "The Big Pond" scored an instantaneous hit that was especially marked by the metropolitan critics because of its comedy and the clean wholesome amusement it afforded.

THE "BIG POND" RELATED A STORY

The "Big Pond" related a story of a mid-western family on a trip to "do Europe." Barbara Billings, being rather young and impressionable, complicated the tour by falling desperately in love with a French count, who, having lost all his health during the war, had been confined in a lunatic asylum. Barbara was making his living by acting as courier or guide for wealthy tourists.

BILLARD BALLS

"Our passion for well-rounded education is such that we are in danger of manufacturing a nation of billiard balls," stated William J. Nickols in a recent issue of the Atlantic Monthly. It is a worthy danger, if it is, really impending. No, it is not a prematurely an age of specialization. Consider the case of the colored minister, who, when asked by another member of the same profession, "Where at ah yo preachin', Brother?" answered, "I seem'n't hawin' any preachin' job, noavadays."

"Yesah, Ie a preachin' preacher and Ie a good 'un too. But it others had since the walk, folks don't care for nuthin' but prayin' preachers."

"A jack of all trades is good for none" is an old axiom, but it was never more pertinent than at the present time. In all walks of life from governing to teaching a rural school, from managing big business, to serving a specialist. Educators of today realize this. Very few colleges attempt to manufacture scholars who delved into all of the fields. Most aim to turn out a person particularly adapted toward some definite line of work, such as, Medicine, Engineering, Teaching, Writing and farming.

VANITY

Vanity—No, I don't refer to one of those oblong, square or round cases which are termed vanities and seem to be numerous on this and every college campus. I am thinking about that almost insufferable air which is prevalent among all types of people, not only those who attend college, although it is much in evidence there, too. It is being, elated with self-admiration, so the Dictionary tells me, but I believe I have beat Webster in this time. Vanity is that disease which causes the victim to see themselves through the small lens of the microscope. A vain came from the Latin word "Vanus" meaning empty and that person who is possessed with the affliction of vanity continually lives up to the Roman's definition when it comes to mentality.

Have you heard any say, "Oh boy, I wish that I could buy him, (or what he's worth and sell him for what he's worth) like that person who has a well-developed sense of vanity which is just another way of saying that he is egotistical, self centered, disagreeable.

—The Houstonian

For the next few minutes we will give you a stocky report, dealing with the recent fall stocks and the consequent rise in all food prices that are governed by the bacteria that float in the ether that surrounds the earth in the zone just north of the isothermal lines that cross the earth a little distance from Kalamazoo, Michigan, where Ford cars are used in great numbers to carry off the surplus profits made by the farmers. Inevitably, the present trend toward normalcy in the rift made by the present split in the Republican ranks who have been loitering over a tariff schedule that seeks to make it harder for small to get sufficient food to sustain them in good condition until captured by a whale who is practicing for a duel with a swordfish of sufficient size and weight to make it interesting for a group of sports' editors to put along side one of the favorite and frequent predictions as to the probable outcome of the Yale-Harvard game to be played before a committee of capitalists who are trying to determine just how much relief of income tax they will probably get from "Faced" Andrew Mellon. He makes his remarks sufficiently late next year to insure his being voted a medal for heroic action in saving the aforesaid millionaires from the poisonous fumes which is confined all the poor fish of both sexes who have been buying and selling stocks as directed and recommended by the defunct cantankerous manager of the fraudulent AFS who got lots of advertising out of his much advertised race for the presidency at the time when there was little or no doubt that all the lambs operating on the stock exchange were metamorphosing into asses by the enormous pressure brought to bear by the backers of Wall Street, and the hopes that the reactionary of Chicago would not be able to get all the savings of the common people before the straggle forces of South Texas and elsewhere became ripe enough to ship through glutting the market for "Snow-birds" who buy citrus rather than preferred shares on the exchange secured by a first mortgage on swamp lands that were originally in the lowlands along the coast of Florida before that state went Republican

The Ocala Current Events Society for Colored Men was organized on November 1928 through the efforts of many of our club members. The members are: O. C. TO THE COACH
 And a true gentleman he is.
 Not as pure and white as snow
 But virtue and faith are his.

He is a gentle one
 And beloved by some I'm told.
 Who know he is true blue son
 Of the dear old Blue and Gold.

A coach is good as long
 As he can coach and win;
 And when he begins to lose
 There he is done.

No matter how good a coach
 He is, and how the men
 Sometimes the good father we Can't luck.

Does not favor his hand
 So do not criticize to severely
 Or what you think is right now
 For almost all the boys have
 That E. T. Spirit and how!

It is easy to criticize
 But it is hard to praise.
 When the road is rough
 And gloomy are the days.

But listen my Friends,
 What it takes is not
 Criticism of action and thought
 And that eternal knock.

What it takes is a glad hand
 And a kind word of cheer.
 That is the way to make a man
 Love and respect his school day.

So my Friends if I may
 I'd like to suggest
 That instead of losing hope
 Take everything for the best.

Do not knock the team or coach
 But give each a plain name
 That'll cheer, "Better luck next time!"

And help them all you can.
 Think ahead of the future
 And make it glowing and bright
 Let's all work together
 To make everything all right.
 —A member of the Blue football squad.

 And that's a silhouette of you
 So fragile
 And so still

FRUAD MAKES MARETT FOR COTTONESED OIL

The widespread use of cottonseed oil as a table and cooking fat has been a source of concern and anxiety throughout the world is due to the attempt of the mercantile merchant to defraud his customers, according to Arthur Coleman in the current issue of HOLLANDER MAGAZINE. Under the caption of Cotton—From Waste to Wealth Mr. Coleman gives the following incident:

"Cottonseed oil found an eager recipient in the person of one Mercantile oil merchant who saw no particular or immediate harm in mixing a small portion of it with a large batch of olive oil for the South American market. Not bothering to make new labels, he stuck his regular 'pure olive' labels on the mixture and shipped it. Somewhat apprehensively, he waited for complaints. None came—as he expected—the proportion of cottonseed oil in the portion of cottonseed oil in the next shipment, and again was ready for objections. Still, none came.

"The merchant ever did come. Instead the demand increased with the proportion of cottonseed oil, and the merchant finally proposed outright a partnership with the New Orleans mill from which he purchased the cotton oil, to be furnished the 'pure olive' oil packages from Marseilles, and the mill to do the packing and shipping.

Coleman also says that the Chinese burned cottonseed oil in lamps as far back the year 1660; that in 1867 Mississippi farmers $200.00 for mixing cottonseed in waterways to accumulate near towns. Cottonseed today enters into the making of low comedicated kerosene from roofing and explosives to cosmetics and phonograph records.

Baylor University
One fourth of the Baylor student body worked their way thru Baylor last year, paying a part or all of their expenses. Of this number, 281 were men, and 107 were women. Of the students who worked to pay expenses in school, the time expended ranged from 2 to 40 hours per week.

The grades of the working students are not materially below that of the average student; the survey revealed last year, and in some cases, it is higher than the average.

Outplay Visitors At Every Stage Of Game

In an effort to sweep the last obstacle from their path to the district championship, the powerful Commerce High School Tigers defeated the Tigers of the Leonard High School by a 32 to 0 score Monday afternoon when they met for the second time this season on the Lion's athletic field. The game featured a demonstration of some of the best football ever displayed by the Commerce players proving that they are worthy of the title which they have won.

The outstanding players of the game were Martin, Stevens, Lewis and Boyer. Martin showed his real football ability when he plowed the line and raced around the ends for scores. His quick and unflinching gains, Stevens and Lewis found the ends easy for good yardage, and Boyer, last Commerce end, succeeded in making spectacular tackles behind the line of scrimmage.

The Commerce delegation attempted only four punts, one of which was completed for a total gain of 80 yards. This was interpreted by the other incomplete. Of the seventeen that the Leonard club were sent for, only three were completed for a total gain of 33 yards; three were intercepted, and the remainder were incomplete. Ten penalties were drawn by the visiting team, resulting in a net gain of 100 yards. In comparison to the eight penalties which were called on the local 90 yards. Of the 15 first downs that were made during the entire game, Commerce made 9 and the visitors but six.

In the first quarter, no scores were made, but during the first of the second period, Martin made good progress on the field and Lewis carried the ball around right end for the first time in his career. He made the extra point when he kicked the 30 yard line. In the third quarter, Stevens and Martin raced around left end for 2 more touchdowns, but neither extra point was made. A sack by Stevens to Lewis to Martin, was responsible for the fourth score.

On the first play of the fourth period, the last time that the visitors were in the game, the Warner was stacked up, when Commerce intercepted a pass and ran 20 yards to the goal line and kicked the goal for the extra point. The contest ended with the ball almost in the center of the field and Martin still gaining.

Initial lineup and substitutions for both teams followed: Commerce: Andrews and Boyer, ends; Jack Stephens and Oscar tackles; Brunson and Warner guards; Bryant center; Guy Stevens, halfback; Lewis fullback; Substitutions: Bowman, running; Rathbott, Jones, Wheeler, Health, Dempse, Masters.

Commerce: Bailey and Mackwell, ends; Suddeths and Maxwell, tackles; Robbins and Winter, line guards; Winton, center; Little, quarter; Thornton and White, fullbacks; Harris, fullback; Substitutions: Harwick, Packer and Smith.

They will meet on the 20th at 10:30 a. m. on the football field.

DR. NEU TO NAME BEST HISTORY OF STATE WRITTEN

Dr. C. T. Neu, head of the history department of the East Texas State Teachers College, has been designated by the chairman of the History Section of the Texas State Teachers Association to select the best history book written by a Texas author.

Using C. W. Hall, of the sociology department of the local college, and Dr. Newton of North Texas State Teachers College as assistants to assist in the work, Dr. Neu states that he is finding a number of splendid books written by historians of this state.

These-Goettlinger, of Dallas, is offering a prize to the author of the book selected by Dr. Neu and his colleagues.

"It is a fine thing," stated Dr. Neu for a firm to encourage the writing of histories, and I find that Texas scholars are writing and producing a number of splendid works within the last year."

DENTON, Texas, Nov. 20.—The Southwest Teachers College Bobcats are leading under the leadership of the T. I. A. A. WHAT FRESHMEN
SHOULD KNOW

Leave the auditorium while a chapel program is being given. It makes you popular with the Master.

Sit on the grass. It makes Mr. Lutz like you.

Walk across the campus. That removes the barren look of the scene.

Keep your grade books when they should be in the registrar's office. That will make—Mr. Young like you.

Don't speak to anyone. That shows your individuality.

Go to sleep in class. That makes the prof. think that he is a nothing speaker.

Make noise in the library. That will gain you an introduction to the student council.

Put all classes possible in that which you will become acquainted with the deans.

Take girls auto riding. That shows your individuality.

Be late to class. It makes you stand out from the common student.

Smoke on the campus. It looks like a freshmen.

Whisper to your classmates. It shows the prof. that he is not the only one who is capable of speaking.

Draw the prof's picture on the blackboard. That shows your appreciation of your artistical talent.

Try your prof. how you were taught in high school. He will appreciate your assistance.

Chew gum in class. That's one way to use your head.

Lean at a soda dispenser. It affords more personal contact.

"THE BIG POND"

ASHBURN STEVENS, noted critic of The Chicago Herald Examiner, has this to say about "The Big Pond," the trans-athletic feature written by George Middleton and A. E. Thomas: "The story is a corking idea—and one you'll seldom find elsewhere. It is a piece of unapproachable laughter at the Woods last night." The story relates the experience of a mid-winter family on a trip to Europe, is packed with clean wholesome fun, and is an absolutely admirable story that moves fast to a smashing climax. A delightful touch of romance runs through the play which is to be presented here by The Belthair Players, headed by Noah Belthair, foremost character.

STUDENTS JOIN
K. OF P. LODGE

Initial degrees were given to several college students for admission into the Knights of Pythias Monday night. They will probably be given a second degree initiation next Monday night. Among those initiated were Joe Morrison and Portland Johnson.

On and on he rode, ready for adventure, for the land of the unexplored was inhabited by strange creatures different from his own race. Of these creatures Blankenship had heard many strange and weird tales, also he had never come into contact with any of the inhabitants, even he, reckoned for his bravery, heitated once or twice just he should suddenly encounter a terrifying enemy. But the night in high school. He will spend of adventure urged him on.

At length he found a many leagues into the ghostly forest of night, he felt a quiver. Gazing about for a comfortable seat, his eyes fell upon a strangely carved stool, which was evidently used by the Mankiers in ceremonial rites.

Being extremely tired, he seated himself with a sigh of relief, hoping in the meanwhile that he would not be forced to flee from any enemy, until he had recovered his lost strength. He had been reposing there only a few moments when he heard a slight tripping tapping on the marble floor of the strange forest of Marini.

Grasping his only opportunity Blankenship forced his voice to the front of Blithern, a God which he had heard that the Mankiers worshipped.

If you are a Mankier," he called with a terrifying voice

"ohy the will of the Gods and give me time to assume my inviolable form."

The Mankier, so terrified to hear the voice of Blithern, fled with all possible haste to the hall of Envoiced.

Blankenship, elated with his successful run, immediately left the wonderful forest, with the marble floor and rushed madly to return unharmed to his own castle.

As he passed the borderland of the country of the Mankiers, the imposing form of a nondescript Finshutem barred his passage. Once again the intrepid Blankenship trembled for he knew his fate lay in the hands of the man of Finshutem.

The new enemy of Blankenship was so astonished to see him returning from the unexplored and forbidden land of the Mankiers, that he was unable to speak. Blankenship fled past this sentinel and reached his own castle never to exit again.
